BOSTON CAPTURED

DEFENDERS FLANKED

The war game for the capture or defence of Boston ceased at Hanover Four Corners at 1 o'clock this afternoon, with the victorious "Red" Army regarding Boston as a captured city, from a theoretical standpoint.

There was fighting right up to the close of the war, because the advance guard of the Blues, coming at the double quick from Pembroke, had intercepted the main body of the Reds at Hanover Four Corners. The fighting, which began there, was the last desperate effort of Brigadier-General Pew of the defence to head off the onrush o fthe invasion through Hanover, Rockland, Braintree and Quincy to Boston.

Last Fight To-day.

This engagement at Hanover Four Corners was the final one of the four-days' war. The outcome of this battle and of the whole war will not be officially known for several months, maybe a year. There will have to be endless marching and countermarching on paper and much slaughtering by the pencils of expert tacticians before Major-General Leonard Wood, the umpire-in-chief, will announce that Boston was captured, as every one believes.

No Parade in Boston.

General Wood said regarding the war game:

"From an educational standpoint these war manoeuvres have been the greatest thing in the history of the country."

There will be no street parades in Boston to-morrow. The Reds and Blues will stay in camp till Saturday. Then the Blues will go home and the Reds will return to their foreign soil.

General Wood decided against th eproposed street parade in Boston, saying:

"The men are too tired. It's all over now. We will let them into camp and go home Saturday."

As soon as the war game ended preparations were made to go into camp. The Reds camped where they were in Hanover. The Blues went over to West Hanover for a resting place.

General Bliss had come into Hanover Four Corners with his Reds from Pembroke, having outflanked General Pew at Bryantville early in the day.

Fighting began at 5 o'clock at Bryantville. General Bliss flung a brigade made up of the Washington and Connecticut troops on Pew's right wing. The fight waged bitterly, with Plymouth street in Bryantville as a central point of the engagement. A part of the Fifth Regiment of the Second Brigade was completely cut off by the Washington troops, which constituted the extreme left wing of the Reds. At this point General Pew made the apparently fatal move of flinging forward his entire right wing to meet this feint attack instead of covering the territory open to the left of the defence.

Captured Whole Battery.

In this right wing which was moved forward to meet the Red attack was the Second Brigade, Massachusetts Infantry, and the Coast Artillery, acting as infantry.

The way the regiments went into action was inspiring, even for a mimic war. They had orders to repulse the Reds and hold the position. They not only did this, but they also captured a whole Washington battery and half a wagon train that was lumbering along in the rear of the Washington troops. When the theoretical slaughter was over the dead and wounded of the Reds lay scattered about in heaps, theoretic heaps, of course.

But the repulse was fruitless for the Blues. For, under cover of the attack of General Tasker H. Bliss of the United States Army, who, as commander of the Red Army, has, it is believed, strategically captured Boston.

ELLEN, WOLF SELECTED FOR SONDER RACE

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 19.—The sonder boat Ellen, owned and sailed by C. P. Curtis, Jr., is thought to have been selected by the regatta committee as one of the three boats to represent the United States in the coming international sonder boat race with the Germans, while the Wolf, owned and sailed by Caleb Loring, has been figured as the second boat to have been picked.

At 11 o'clock the committee boat put out from Marblehead harbor, followed by the six sonder boats that had not been eliminated last night, viz.: The Ellen, Joyette, Manchester III., Skeezix and Crooner.

The wind then absolutely flattened out at Halfway Rock and the committee decided to go farther out with the idea of possibly catching a breeze sufficient to race. But even when three miles out in Massachusetts Bay the desired wind refused to arrive.

With little prospect of a race the committee finally hoisted the signal for the Ellen to report at the committee boat, and soon after she was sent back to Marblehead harbor. Then the Wolf was called in, which has given the impression on shore that the committee have decided upon these boats as two of the three that will conest with the German boats.

This will leave the third representative to be picked from the Joyette, Manchester III., Skeezix and Crooner.

Finally, at 1 o'clock the signal ball dropped for a start between the four boats left. Crooner was first across the line, but through beating the time was obliged to turn back and recross, losing one and one-quarter minutes. Skeezix got away the best, followed by Joyette, Manchester III and Crooner. It was a drifting match, and will result in no race unless the wind should strike up later on.

DROP WEST POINT HAZERS

WEST POINT, Aug. 19.—By the order of President Taft the military career of seven young cadets came abruptly to an end to-day, due to their implication in the recent hazing of Cadet Redando Sutton, brother of Lieutenant J. N. Sutton, the slain marine officer.

The finding of the court was announced to-day, and Cadets John H. Booker, Jr., first class, of Georgia; Richard W. Hocker, second class, Kansas City; Earl W. Dunmore, third class, Utica, N. Y.; Chauncey C. Devore, third class, Wheeling, W. Va.; Gordon Lefevre, third class, Richmond, Va.; Albert E. Crane, third class, Iowa, and Jacob S. Fortner, third class, Alabama, were dismissed. The report and recommendation of the board have been taken before Secretary of War Dickinson, who, after certifying all points, concurred in the recommendation of the board. Cadet Sutton was more seriously injured than at first supposed, and he has been in the hospital until this week, when he reported for duty.

SPRINGFIELD BANK PRESIDENT DEAD

CHICOPEE, Aug. 19—Arthur B. West, president of the Chicopee National Bank of Springfield, died here to-day of heart disease, aged sixty-six. He had been in the banking business for forty-five years, working up to his present position from a clerkship.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, New York, Aug. 19.—Determined to win both games to-day and hoping the Athletics would lose to the Naps, the Red Sox went into the fray with first place in sight.

Manager Lake and all his players were brim full of confidence. This was shown in the snappy practice and the general liveliness of the Boston players.

Frank Arellanes, the Spaniard, was especially groomed for the first game. He had a fine warm-up and then went to the bench while his companions went to bat in the first inning.

Opposed to Arellanes was Wrahop, who has pitched some fine games, but the Red Sox feared him not, although they went down in order at the start.

Even though their team was walloped by the Boston pennant chasers, the New York fans attended this afternoon's performance in good fashion. About 1 o'clock, when the Boston players arrived at the park, there was a goodly bunch of bugs on the job, and when the first game was started the stands were well filled.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

1 DEAD, 1 DYING; HIT BY ENGINE

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 19.—One man was killed and one fatally injured at the Pine street grade crossing on the New Haven railroad to-day. Timothy Kenney, forty years of age, of Pine street, Central Falls, is dead, while Michael Waldron, thirty-eight years of age, of the same street and town, is dying at the Twin City Hospital here.

Both men were section hands. They were working with a gang at the Pine street crossing when the passenger train due here from Providence at 8:10 came along. They stepped out of this train's way, but directly in front of a switching engine.

STANDARD IN HEINZE DEAL?

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Richard S. Kaufman, the note broker who negotiated with the Windsor Trust Company for the $50,000 Joyce loan, which was followed by the theft of $110,000 worth of Heinze securities from the trust company, appeared before the grand jury to-day with testimony which is said to indicate that the Standard Oil Company was involved in the scandal.

According to Kaufman, Charles Katz, president of the Eastern Brewing Company, the supposed lender of the Joyce note, conversed freely with him concerning the transaction. Katz, he said, told him that the Standard Oil Company was interested in the matter and was anxious to get control of the Heinze stock.

STRICKEN AT GOLF MATCH.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—While watching a golf tournament at Minocqua, Wis., Nathaniel Moore, son of J. Hobart Moore, the capitalist, was overcome by the heat. His condition is said to be serious.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Aug. 19.—For the first time since Sunday the Doves got a chance to play ball to-day. They lined up against the Brooklyn Dodgers in a double-header, working off a postponed game with the regular.

Both teams have had a good rest and the small gathering of fans expected some fast play. The games cut no particular ice in the National League race, but the Doves were anxious to win so as to eventually get out of last place while the Brooklyns were just as ready to improve their position in the second division.

20 INJURED BY COLLAPSE

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Twenty persons were badly hurt to-day by the collapse of a covered walk beneath the Brooklyn approach to the new Manhattan bridge, which carried down with it a scaffolding on which fifteen men were at work. The men and half a dozen pedestrians were caught in a heap of debris.

Eleven of the injured were seriously hurt, two fatally. The covered walk and the scaffolding above it fell with a tremendous crash that aroused the neighborhood. The men who were buried in the debris added their cries to the uproar, and people in nearby houses rushed out and immediately set to work to get the twenty people from beneath the splintered beams that covered them.

Acting Captain Dooley with the reserves from the Fulton street station was quickly on the scene. The bluecoats, soon reinforced by others from police headquarters, took charge and began taking out the men and carrying them to ambulances.

HORSE CHARGES 3,000 PEOPLE

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 19.—A man and a woman were seriously hurt, and a number of persons received minor injuries when the horses attached to Engine 1, which was doing an exhibition hitch, ran into a crowd of 3,000 people, in front of the central fire station shortly after noon.

Frank H. Harvey, the driver of the engine, is at the Sacred Heart Hospital, with injuries of the head and spine. Mrs. M. Elizabeth Whittier, aged sixty-four, who was thrown ten feet, is at her home, No. 1363 Elm street, with both bones of her left forearm broken.

The horses became frightened by the cheering of the crowd and bolted. Driver Harvey dropped one of the reins, and before he could recover it the horses had dragged the engine through the crowd.

BOY OF 2 DROWNS AT FALL RIVER

FALL RIVER, Aug. 19.—Raymond Wishart, aged two, son of Gilbert Wishart of North Main street, was drowned in the Taunton River this noon. With his sister Alice, aged eight, the little fellow had gone for a walk. She left him for a moment to go into a store, and Raymond fell off the pier. The body was found in the river a half hour later.

BARGE SINKS, 5 MEN LOST IN BIG GALE

SAUNDERSTOWN, R. I., Aug. 19.—The barge Shawmont, with a crew of five men, bound from Philadelphia for Portsmouth, N. H., broke away from the tug Valley Forge, off Shinnecock, L. I., early Tuesday morning and it is believed certain that she went to the bottom with all hands.

Five other barges bound for Providence, Boston and Newburyport broke away and floated helplessly for ten hours before they were picked up. One man was injured badly and was carried ashore for treatment when the Valley Forge arrived here to-day, bringing news of the disaster.

The barges left Philadelphia on Sunday, in tow of the tugs Valley Forge and Monocacy. When off Shinnecock they ran into a heavy northeast gale.

The missing barge was commanded by Captain Alfred Gould of Cape Cod. The names of the seamen are unknown here.

NEARLY DROWNED BY A DEVIL FISH

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Caught in the embrace of a devil fish, William H. Buchols of Baltimore was nearly dragged to death before he was saved by his friend, James V. Lorber of the same city, while the two were on a fishing trip in Newfoundland. His body still bore the marks of the great tentacles when he and his companion reached here to-day on the Red Cross line steamer Rosalind.

SQUIRREL INVADES THE STATE HOUSE

While the squirrels playing about Boston Common have for some years made a practice of using the front lawn of the State House grounds as a storehouse for provisions, one of the little fellows to-day invaded the capital to seek new Winter quarters. He raced across Historic Hall [illegible] the whole length of the State House to the headquarters of the State Board of Education, where he is hiding.

RICH LAWYER KILLS HIMSELF WITH PISTOL

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 19.—Albert Gerald, a wealthy young lawyer of this city, was found dead near the rear entrance to his beautiful home on Arlington avenue, East Providence, early to-day, with two bullet wounds in his heart. A thirty-eight caliber revolver lay at his side, evidently just fallen from his hand.

The body was found by a carpenter employed in the vicinity. The Medical Examiner was notified, but the police declare that the young man undoubtedly took his own life.

Gerald was thirty-seven years old. He was connected with the law firm of Edwards & Angell. He was wealthy and a member of one of the most prominent families in the city. He was married and had two children.

Gerald, with his family, was spending the Summer at Warwick, where they have a Summer home near that of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island. Yesterday Gerald came to Providence. His purpose is not known. His friends gave absolutely no reason why he should kill himself.

JACK JOHNSON SUES HOTEL FOR $25,000

SALT LAKE, Utah., Aug. 19.—Jack Johnson has entered suit against a hotel here for $25,000 for excluding him because he is a negro.

PINCHOT SET BACK.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 19.—Because the members of the resolutions committee of the Trans-Mississippi Congress feared that the harmony of their convention might be marred, they have decided to table the resolution endorsing Chief Government Forester Clifford Pinchot.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Cleveland, Aug. 19.—The Naps, who have been going like a house a-fire lately, lined up to-day against the Athletics who are making a great fight to win the American League pennant.

Mack put in his best available pitcher and told his boys to do their best. But his men needed no encouragement. They are out for that extra money which can only be had by winning the pennant. With the Red Sox and Tigers close on their heels the Mackmen could afford to take no chances. It is to be hard work for them from now to the close of the season.

The Naps were determined to take a fall out of the leaders and show the Cleveland public that they are just as good a bunch of players as there are in the American League.

NO OWNER FOR STRANDED YACHT

The large pleasure yacht that came ashore on the beach at Fort Heath, Winthrop, last Sunday, during the storm, is still in that locality, no owner having come forth to claim her. The yacht is fast being broken up by the severe seas that wash against her. A squad of police from Winthrop have stripped the yacht of all of her valuable furnishings. The yacht is a valuable one and the police are very desirous of having the owner take her away.

BENNETT PARK, Detroit, Aug. 19.—The desperate Tigers crossed bats with the headstrong White Sox again to-day and made the effort of their lives to regain some of their lost ground.

There is no denying the fact that Jennings and his men are worried over the baseball situation and they are making every possible play to keep right up in the running.

With nothing much to lose or gain, but with a general idea that they want revenge, the White Sox determined to keep up the fine work and take another fall out of the American League champs. The local fans are getting anxious and think they see the pennant slipping out of the Tigers' hands.

BOY THROWS ICE; WOMAN INJURED

Struck by a piece of ice thrown by six-year-old Eugene Hayden, Miss Catherine Ryan of No. 91 West street, Needham, was badly injured to-day. She was riding on the front seat of an inward-bound Waltham car in West Newton when the boy threw the ice and hit her on the chest. Motorman George Hicks stopped the car, and captured the boy, who was taken to headquarters.

SHARON STREETS OPENED TO AUTOS

Declaring that streets of merely local importance only should be excluded to automobiles, the Highways Commission today reversed the decision of the Selectmen of the town of Sharon and opened all the streets there to automobiles with the exception of Tolman, Pine and Furnace streets.

REDS FLANK DEFENDERS AND MARCH ON HELPLESS BOSTON

his First Brigade on the Blues' right, General Bliss flanked the Blues' left with his main column, and while the feint attack was raging in the streets of Bryantville, was hurrying his main body on to the Pembroke road and toward Boston.

Too late General Pew realized the full significance of the hollow victory his Second Brigade had won in repulsing the attack on his ringht wing. Pew ahd established field headquarters at Bryantville. Hastily abandoning these, he gathered up what cavalry, artillery and infantry he could assemble and set out, by a shorter road, on a desperate chase to head off the Red advance at Pembroke, Hanover, Four Corners or anywhere that he could.

The Red advance, after flanking Pew's left, was made beautifully. The body moved in concentrated form, in contrast to the scattered appearance of the Blue forces.

A second engagement took place at Mayflower Grove. Latest reports from it were that it was a draw. But all the time Bliss was pressing forward with his main column. It is probable that the engagement at Mayflower Grove was a skirmish between advance guards. Or it may have been a fight between the First Brigade of Reds, which was covering the rear of the invaders, and the First Brigade of Blues, which had been driving it back at Bryantville.

Throughout this series of engagements the Washington and Connecticut troops were sacrificed by Bliss for the benefit of the main body and to carry out his flanking tactics. It was the old case of hurling in a brigade to destruction to enable the main body to move on.

Boston Is Helpless.

Meanwhile, the Fifth Regiment, Massachusetts Infantry, which had been cut off from the main body of the Blues, had made a wide detour to rejoin its brigade.

The Red column pressed on victoriously toward Pembroke. Just before the Red column arrived at Pembroke it was attacked by the advance guard of the Blues, which had been ordered over on the double-quick by General Pew after the Bryantville engagement to head off and check the Red advance.

A troop of cavalry, galloping fiercely around by way of Indian Head Pond, and followed by Batteries A B and C and by the First and Second Corps Cadets, was reported to have intercepted the Red Army. That the attempt to stop Bliss's advance was unsuccessful was evident from later reports of his passing through Pembroke.

There is nothing to stop the Red invasion of Boston except the apparently impossible feat of General Pew being able to head it off at the vicinity of Hanover Four Corners. It is only twenty-three miles from Hanover Four Corners to Boston. From there the road lies clear by way of Rockland, Braintree and Quincy.

Theoretically Boston is in momentary danger of being invaded. If General Bliss and his Reds were an actual instead of an imaginary enemy, they would camp on Boston Common to-night and take possession of the city.

War at End at 1 O'Clock.

The war game was scheduled to cease at 1 o'clock this afternoon, with possibly an hour or more of grace for General Pew if he could show reasonable hope of being able to achieve anything decisive in that time. If the extra hour would be futile, the war was to come to an end.

The countryside to-day had a splendid chance to see mimic warfare. The "natives" and Summer residents of Bryantville, Hanson, Halifax, Pembroke and other places inland on the South Shore came out in hundreds to cheer the defence and invaders alike.

In a big touring car Governor Eben S. Draper, his son and Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham whirled along the roads, watching the fighting. The Governor had the mimic pleasure of seeing his defenders outflanked by the ruthless invaders and the way made easy for the capture of his State House on Beacon Hill.

THE WAR GAME.

"Mamma, what do these soldiers here,
In dark and grim array?"
"Take heart my son, be not alarmed,
'Tis but a soldier play.
You see, the Army of the Red
Is fighting with the Blue;
But those slain men aren't really dead,
No more than I or you."

"Mamma, why do they shoot their guns
If this is all in jest?"
"Hush, hush, my son; cannot you see
This is a wondrous test?
For this will prove our proudest boast,
That we'd be well prepared
To crush a bold invading host
If any 'gainst us fared."

"But, mother, if this war of play
Should prove our coast is weak?"
"Why then, my son, for happiness
No further would we seek;
For see, if our invading ranks
Should seize our land defenses,
We still could cheer and offer thanks
For how strong our offense is."

MORAL.

My son, one cannot eat his cake
And have it, but this game
Would make one think so; if we lose
We're winning just the same.

ARTHUR ROCHE.

MAIL FOR REDS FAILS TO REACH INVADING ARMY

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 19.—At the local office there is a quantity of mail for the Reds and it is impossible to deliver it. Inspector Frank H. Rice of Boston was here and in communication with officers of the Red Army in an endeavor to have the tangle straightened out so that the mail may be properly delivered. It is thought to-night that a plan has been worked out which will fix it in the future.

Before the "war" it was announced that the mail for the Blue Army would be sent to Bridgewater, from which point it would be distributed. This has been done and the mail consigned to the Blue soldiers has been cared for nicely, and with comparatively little delay.

No notice was given, so far as can be learned, as to the disposition of the mail for the Reds, and it has been going everywhere about here from which press dispatches have been received announcing the Reds' movements.

To-day's Movements of Contending Armies

Three hours' battle fought at daybreak at Bryantville, near South Hanson. Complete victory for Red Army.

Blue Army swept aside and Red Army marches toward Boston.

General Bliss reached State road to Boston at Pembroke and Hanover, which will bring him into Boston quickly by way of Hingham and Quincy.

General Pew and his Blue Army have failed in their attempt to defend Boston from capture.

Only hope lies in harassing the Red Army by burning bridges and constant attack on the invaders.

WORLD RACERS DUE IN BOSTON THIS EVENING

Delayed at Montreal, Benjamin Morris and his escort, Peter Cohen, the first of the BOSTON AMERICAN world racers, will not reach Boston until 7:10 o'clock this evening, arriving at North station over the Canadian Pacific Railroad from Vancouver. If the train is on time, Morris will have made the 25,000-mile circuit of the earth in 42 days 19 hours and 10 minutes, beating the previous world's record 17 days and 17 hours.

Morris was originally scheduled to return via St. Paul, Chicago and Albany, but his plans were switched upon arriving at Vancouver. He has an outside chance of beating H. L. Whitman, the other BOSTON AMERICAN racer, who is rushing toward New York as fast as the Mauretania of the Cunard line will carry him. Whitman is due to arrive some time to-morrow, the exact time depending upon the time the steamer will dock at New York.

The race between this pair has been exceptionally keen right along the line. Whitman started with a handicap of a day in the calendar, as he was traveling toward the setting sun. This handicap was eliminated when the Canadian Pacific ocean greyhound, the Empress of Japan, cut more than a day from her best previous trans-Pacific record. This evened up matters between Morris and Whitman.

The only other BOSTON AMERICAN racer is Leo Sallinger, who is still on the Pacific, bound for San Francisco on board the Manchuria. He will land on Wednesday of next week and will then rush to Boston.

MRS. FAY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Delia B. Fay of No. 57 Carey avenue, Chelsea, was held to-day at St. Rose's Catholic Church, Broadway. Burial was at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden. Mrs. Fay was the wife of John Fay, a well-known citizen.

3 BURNED BY EXPLOSION IN SHOE FACTORY

Three men were painfully burned in an explosion to-day in the Thomas G. Plant shoe factory, Jamaica Plain. Following the explosion and a slight fire, there was considerable excitement for a few minutes among the hundreds of men and women employes of the factory. A number of young women were taken to their homes after the fire in a semi-exhausted condition as a result of the excitement. The men burned, all of whom are at the City Hospital, are:

William E. Mullins, twenty-two years old, of No. 29 Valentine street, Roxbury.

Fred Gualtore, twenty-one years old, No. 17 Tileston street, Roxbury.

Julius De Lang, No. 229 Emery street, Roxbury.

De Lang's condition is serious. He is badly burned about the hands, arms and legs and may die. The other men were burned about the hands and arms.

The explosion was caused by the upsetting of one of the oil lamps used to heat irons in the edge-setting department.

CITIZENS IN UPLIFT.

The West Dorchester Improvement Association, organized for the betterment of the section which bears its name, was formed last night. Cornelius J. Desmond was elected president, Joseph A. Barry, vice-president; Henry G. Smith, secretary, and Councilman Clifford C. Best, treasurer. The next meeting of the association will be held August 25.

$7,778,000,000 IN 1908 CROP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in his annual report, says those who have been pitying the farmer had better wake up to the fact that during the past year—that is the crop year of 1908—there was a net gain in the value of crops, which raises the total valuation of farm products up to the astonishing total of $7,778,000,000, the biggest in the world's history.

"While these figures contain some duplication," the secretary explains, "they do not contain important items of wealth production, and the fact remains that the unthinkable amount of seven and three-fourth billions of dollars of wealth have been produced by farmers this year for national sustenance and for export to the craving millions of foreign nations.

"It is a real tangible wealth at the time it leaves the hands of the producer. It is about four times the value of the products of the mines, including mineral oils and precious metals."

WOMEN FIGHTERS FINED $5 EACH

An altercation between Mrs. Nellie Mannix and Mrs. Mary E. Creighton came up for decision in the Malden District Court to-day and Judge Fernald fined each $5. Mrs. Mannix is president of the Malden Domestic Workers' Union and Mrs. Creighton is secretary of the union. They are neighbors on Highland avenue, Malden. In the mass of conflicting evidence the real facts of just why they started to fight could not be learned.

TRAIL SLAYERS OF PETROSINO

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—With a mysterious report on work accomplished by them in Italy since the assassination of Lieutenant Petrosino, Lieutenant Tony Vachris and Detective Crowley of police headquarters returned to New York to-day. It was reported that they had information which might lead to the arrest of the assasins of Petrosino.

When Police Commissioner Bingham was deposed, one of his last acts was to send a cablegram to Vachris and Crowley ordering them to return at once. Vachris cabled back that he and his partner had obtained important evidence and that if permitted to remain a few weeks longer they could round it all up. This they did.

It is reported that the two detectives obtained the names of between 300 and 400 aliens now in New York who are undesirables and ought to be deported.

GREAT SUFFERING RESULT OF FLOOD

DENVER, Aug. 19.—Reports of great damage from flood reached here to-day from many points along the Arkansas River. Trains are sidetracked, railroad trackage is wiped away in many places, the gorges are rushing torrents and scores of homes have been washed away. Hundreds of people are homeless. The suffering is keen.

CHAUFFEUR FINED $15.

Thomas H. Manning, a Newton chauffeur, was fined $15 in the Malden District Court for running an auto while under the influence of liquor. He put on the stand as witnesses Alderman Thomas J. Lyons of Newton, who was a passenger in the auto, and the clerk of the court, Dwight Howard, who visited the chauffeur in his cell to bail him, to testify that he was not intoxicated, but the court found him guilty.

33,000,000 IN CHURCHES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A bulletin now in course of preparation by officials of the United States Census Bureau, contains information gathered by the bureau in the fifth census regarding the religious bodies of the United States.

The churches have a total membership of nearly 33,000,000, of which considerably more than one-half are women. Out of the grand total of church members, 61.6 per cent. are Protestants and 36.7 per cent. are Roman Catholics, but in spite of this predominance of the Protestants, in sixteen States a majority of the total church membership is Roman Catholic.

Of the total number of members reported by the various religious bodies and classified by sex, 43.1 per cent. were males and 56.9 per cent. females. Among the Protestants the difference was greater, only 39.3 per cent. being males. In the Roman Catholic Church there were relatively more males, the number forming 49.36 per cent. of the total membership.

Fewer males than females were found among the Latter Day Saints, the Lutherans, the Disciples, the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians and the Protestant Episcopalians, the percentage of male members decreasing in the order shown. There was but 35.4 per cent. of males among the Episcopalians. Among the Christian Scientists only 27.6 per cent. were males.

Of the total estimated population of continental United States in 1906, the church members formed 39.16 per cent.

It is stated in the bulletin that the total number of members reported by the various religious bodies for 1905 was 32,936,445, of which number the Protestants were credited with 20,287,742, and the Roman Catholics with 12,079,142. Of the Protestant bodies the Methodist numbered 5,749,838; the Baptists 5,662,894; the Lutherans 2,112,494; the Presbyterians 1,830,555; and the Disciples of Christ, 1,142,359.

BADLY STABBED BY A WOMAN BEGGAR

Enraged because he refused her request for money, an unknown colored woman stabbed Joseph Willard, forty years old, of No. 20 Chadwick street, while he was walking on Flagg street in the South End. At the City Hospital, where he is a patient, it is reported that he is suffering from a stab wound in the right shoulder, and his condition is serious.

Willard staggered into the City Hospital and before the clerk could learn his trouble, collapsed from loss of blood. One of the doctors was hastily summoned and attended him.

MINOR OUTBREAKS TO-DAY IN CRETE

CANEA, Crete, Aug. 19.—Several minor disturbances were reported from various parts of the island of Crete to-day, but there was no outbreak in the city. Some of the marines landed from warships of the Powers are still here. Peasants came into the city to-day and reported having seen armed bands in some of the districts.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—The Greek reply to Turkey's second note in the Cretan situation was received here to-day. It declares that Greece has no designs on Crete.

SMYTHE BEFORE FINANCE BOARD

The Finance Commission wound up its interrogation of the city department heads to-day when Superintendent of Printing Smythe appeared at the morning session of the investigating body. Superintendent Smythe is one of the few department heads who has followed up the recommendations of the old Finance Commission and his questioning lasted but a few minutes. The commission announced that it would send its report to the Mayor.

CANADA WILL FIRST BUILD CRUISERS

OTTAWA, Aug. 19.—It is understood that Canada will commence the working out of her naval program by the construction of a few first-class cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines, which would prove very valuable in time of war, and to a large extent relieve Great Britain of the necessity of defending Canada.

FINED $50 FOR ATTACK.

For assaulting John MacLane of No. 19 Wrentham street with a whip Harry L. Thayer was fined $50 by Judge Churchill to-day in the Dorchester Court, and his son, Wendell, who held MacLane, was fined $10.

50,000 CHEER FIREMEN VETS AT LAWRENCE

LAWRENCE, Aug. 19.—Fifty thousand people were here to-day, drawn by the annual muster of the New England League of Veteran Firemen. More than thirty tubs were brought here, and the city was crowded as never before.

With the red-shirted veterans came throngs of visitors via the railroad and different electric car lines that centre here. The weather is all that can be desired, the heavy rain of the past few days laying the dust nicely, and the sun of late yesterday afternoon and this morning drying up all the puddles and making the route of procession an ideal one.

Many public and private buildings are adorned for the event and the bright sun and the national colors, together with the old tubs, the marching hosts of firemen and the display of modern fire-fighting apparatus, as shown by the Lawrence Fire Department, which appeared in the parade as escort to the old-fashioned contrivances, made a picture and a beautiful pageant, the like of which has not been seen in the streets of this city for a number of years, if ever before.

The 50,000 or more people that came into the city to see the playout and other features of the muster, were lined along the route of march and filled every vantage point. After the parade they gathered about the playout course on the common in the heart of the city and cheered their favorite tub or association. The day took on the appearance of a holiday, despite the fact that all the stores and most of the workshops were open.

The parade was held promptly at 10 o'clock, starting at that time on a signal on the fire alarm system. Colonel Melvin Beal, the chief of staff, was at the head of the lengthy procession.

In view of the forty or more tubs and associations entered in the muster it will be a late hour to-night before the contest is ended and the winner announced. Apparently it was the finest muster ever conducted under the auspices of the New England League, and the credit rests with the officers and the committee of arrangements of the Lawrence association, who worked hard to make the event the great success that it is.

THE SILKEN CORD—Significant fiction story of the Chinese problem in America will be in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

WAR DIFFERENT NOW AUTOS HAVE ENTERED FIELD, SAYS CONNOLLY

By JAMES B. CONNOLLY.

Famous Short Story Writer and Battalion Quartermaster and Commissary Officer, Second Battalion, Ninth Regiment.

IN THE FIELD WITH THE BLUE ARMY, Aug. 19.—It is getting to be an up-to-date war, this. The commissaries still have their troubles with insufficient wagon-trains and the animals wherewith to haul them, but consider the staff officers in the field, who in other days used to spend much money for thoroughbred mounts—but no longer. Now you find them down, not examining hocks and hoofs, or flanks or withers, but down among chains and tires, with an eye out for cylinder power and seating capacity.

And in other ways! The Zeppelin war balloon hasn't yet been seen hanging in the sky, and there are no scouting aeroplanes—not as yet! But we have cruising auto cars which carry the light field guns. And to see them bumping in and out of the hollows, mounting the crests of the hills, tacking back and forth across country, coming about before the wind with a pilot in the bow and a rapid-fire Hotchkiss mounted aft—why, it is to make you think of the navy! When we get to where we can carry the big two-inch fellows on these automobile batteries and have a war balloon for each company and a fast winging aeroplane for our scouts, then we will have the real thing.

We are still behaving with heroism, all of us. If you don't believe it, you want to be waked up in the middle of the night by a heavy rain beating down on your head or feet, according to which end of you sticks out of the tent. And after you have got up and drawn the flaps and gone to sleep again, only to be routed out again at 3 o'clock for an early march, and find it still pouring rain and your candle won't stay lit. You have to claw around in the dark and discover your spurs and puttees and your horse's bridle and a dozen other things tangled in the gloom, and you dig your poncho out of the mud and go out into the still air, and all you can hear is the pleep-pleep of the rain and the lively conversation of the cooks and waggoners.

Cooks—that is, good army cooks—get up earlier than their company, so that breakfast will be ready before the camp breaks, otherwise all wars would soon end—everybody would get disgusted and go home before time was up. But if the fires won't stay lit and the coffee comes along slowly and time is flying, what are you going to do if you are a cook? Three o'clock in the morning! It is nothing—in fact, a joy—if on such a morning as Monday, for instance, when the stars were out and the air clear and the cook's fire burning beautifully and the men singing and crowing lively. Anybody could be a hero then and go out and charge a dozen "Red" armies, just by way of working up an appetite for breakfast. But this buckling things on in the rain! And this standing around under a tree—if you can get near one—or on the slope of a hill, looking intently at nothing in the distance and trying to imagine how it would look if it wore a red band on its hat. To do this cheerfully and miss a meal or two on the side—no coffee, no nothing, from one evening to the next afternoon—and in the rain—that is something like a hero. That is the Army of the "Blue," and the worst luck we wish the "Reds" is that they are heroes, too.

BIG GUNS FOR "RED DEVILS"

Congressman O'Connell to-day announced the program of oratory that will enliven the annual outing of the "Red Devils" at Squantum on August 28 and incidentally mark the opening of the campaign which the organization will make to retain control of Ward 20.

Congressman John H. Rotherwell of Reading, Pa., Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle of New York and Congressman Michael F. Conroy, who has taken Bourke Cockran's seat in the national house, will be among the speakers.

James H. Vahey, Fred Macleod of the State Committee, "Smiling Jim" Donovan, who bosses the Democratic City Committee, and the congressman host will also speak.

The "Tip Carts," in the meantime, are preparing to marshal their forces and give their old rivals, the "Red Devils," the customary spirited opposition for ward control.

CAPTAIN SURE 300 DROWNED

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 19.—The story of a terrific storm at sea on July 26, in which the liner Waratah is believed to have gone down with 300 persons on board, was told at Albany, West Australia, to-day when the steamer Bannockburn arrived from Nyk.

The Bannockburn was two days' journey out from Cape Town when the storm struck. The deck cargo was shifted, throwing the steamer on her beam ends and causing her nearly to founder. The ship was saved by the cargo being washed overboard.

The captain believes that the Waratah went to the bottom.

QUICK-DARLING WEDDING SLOW

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 19.—General Hutchison of Tennessee may think thirty minutes is long enough to win a wife.

But—

It took seven hours for Henry Quick of Elmira and Miss May Darling of this city, his fiancee, to find anybody with authority to make their two hearts beat as one.

Starting at noon, Quick and Miss Darling visited, one after another, the homes of seven clergymen here. Everyone was out of town.

"Quick, darling," suggested the bride-to-be, then—

"Yes, May darling," answered her sweetheart.

They went in turn to the homes of the other seven clergymen who uplift Ithaca; every man of them was away.

"Quick, darling," sighed the maid.

"Yes, May darling," the swain reassured her.

They hurried to the offices and houses of the only two Justices of the Peace, and found neither. Just as the sun was setting, Quick and Miss Darling learned that the Rev. E. M. Sabin, a retired clergyman, was visiting friends in a suburb.

"Quick, darling!"

"At last, darling."

They jumped into a cab; they found Mr. Sabin; quickly he made Miss Darling Mrs. Quick.

TANGLE OVER JAP VISITORS SETTLED

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 19.—The controversy between the business men of this city and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, in regard to the transportation of the delegation of Japanese commercial commissioners who are about to make a tour of the industrial centres of the United States, has been put at rest by the announcement of President Elliott of the Northern Pacific Railroad and the Pacific Coast Chambers of Commerce that they will defray the traveling expenses of the commissioners on the New Haven road. It was feared the difficulty would cause the commissioners to cross Providence off their itinerary. The visitors will leave Japan Aug. 29.

WALSH, CONVICTED BANKER, NEAR DEATH

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—John R. Walsh, bank wrecker, whose case is pending in the United States Court of Appeals, is at his home to-day in a serious condition, suffering from a fracture of the knee and internal injuries which he received in a street car accident. Walsh's seventy years will make his recovery doubtful.

CYCLONE WRECKS FLYING MACHINES

ROME, Aug. 19.—Many aeroplanes, including a Wright machine were wrecked and buildings were blown over to-day by a cyclone which swept over Brescia, where an aviation meeting is to be held in September. Eight big sheds were demolished, and parts of the flying machines were blown over the field.

CHANGE IN CURATES.

Archbishop W. H. O'Connell has made three changes among the curates of the archdiocese of Boston. The Rev. J. L. Callahan is transferred from the parish of St. Eulalia, South Boston, to Hingham; the Rev. J. J. Murphy is transferred from St. Joseph's parish, Medford to the South Boston parish, and the Rev. Leo J. Logan goes to the St. Joseph parish, Medford.

GREAT FARMAN BIPLANE READY FOR CONTESTS

RHEIMS, France, Aug. 19.—The wonderful Farman biplane, the aerial craft in which M. Roger Sommer made the longest flight ever essayed by an aviator, was set up to-day to be used by Sommer in the contests of aviation week, which begin on Sunday.

Already all preparations are made for the unique exposition, the first and greatest of its kind ever to be held on earth. Yesterday and to-day saw many arrivals of machines and men. Captain Ferber's voisin biplane, Cockburn's Farman biplane, M. Rougier's voisin biplane and Senor Fernandez's biplane were all set up to-day.

Glenn H. Curtiss, the aeronaut who will represent America in the contest, hobbled about with a cane to-day. He is much better and has the physician's word for it that his injured ankle will be well by Sunday.

The Antoinette team is now complete, three of the four machines set up and construction going forward on the fourth to-day.

These aeroplanes will be piloted by Hubert Latham, M. Rene Demanest, Captain Burgeat and M. Ruchonnot. Latham is here and was the centre of a great deal of interest to-day. Following Latham's injuries, received in his attempt to fly across the English Channel, he still wears a bandage around his head to hide an ugly scar.

The Wright team has undergone modifications. Five Wright machines will start. One of them will be piloted by Comte de Lambert, two by M. Paul Tissandier, and one by M. Lefevre. All the machines are fitted up with an extra seat for passengers.

Two of the Bleriot machines had not arrived this morning, but word was given that they would be here before night. M. Bleriot is in Paris.

WORKMAN FALLS 25 FEET FROM STAGING

Miles Ferrick, of No. 27 Worthington street, Roxbury, while working on a staging on a new building at Dana and Center streets, Cambridgeport, to-day fell twenty-five feet to the fround. He was not dangerously injured, but was taken to the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

"The man with a grouch is a mental monstrosity," said Dr. Charles McCormick to a convention of medical experts. "He continually is ill-tempered. He goes about with a long face and apparently believes the world has formed a conspiracy against him. He is an abnormal being."

PROTEST FROM HARVARD MAN

John Jay Chapman of Camden, Me., has sent the following letter to Henry L. Higginson, one of the members of the corporation of Harvard University:

Camden, Me., Aug. 16, 1909.

Henry L. Higginson, Esq., Fellow of Harvard College:

Dear Sir—It is now almost a month since I asked Dr. Eliot, by a letter published in the Boston Transcript, what authority had been given by Harvard University for the use of the name of Harvard in the publication of the so-called "Harvard Classics." Dr. Eliot has not seen fit to gratify my curiosity. If there is something improper or impertinent in my desire to have this mystery cleared up I should like to have some responsible person set me right.

A report now reaches me that the Corporation of Harvard has, by formal vote, twice requested Dr. Eliot to undertake the task of choosing a list of books to be published under the title of "The Harvard Classics," for which service Dr. Eliot is to be paid by the publishers. This series, then, is to bear the name of the university, but is not to be issued by the university. It is to wear the complexion of a learned publication, but is to be a cheap, popular, and moneymaking publication, hastily edited, to which Dr. Eliot and the university lend their names—Dr. Eliot being repaid in money and the university being repaid, so far as appears, only in the advertising which it shall receive through the enterprise.

If I have misstated the nature of the scheme I earnestly desire to be corrected. I am a Harvard graduate and have, therefore, some personal stake in the honor of Harvard. The thing that seems to be wrong about the scheme is that the name of the university is being used to make money for Dr. Eliot and for certain publishers. Yours respectfully,

JOHN JAY CHAPMAN.

EXPLOSION ABOARD DESTROYER KILLS 2

PORSTMOUTH, Eng., Aug. 19.—Official notification was given to-day at the British Navy Headquarters of an explosion on board the destroyer Otter on Monday in Chinese waters, when four men were wounded. Two of them have since died.

ALABAMA TO VOTE ON PROHIBITION

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 19.—In the presence of a select party of prohibition workers and leaders, and several of the W. C. T. U. leaders, Governor Comer signed the bill providing submission of the question of a constitutional prohibition amendment to the voters within ninety days. As he signed it, the Governor turned to a W. C. T. U. leader and said: "You ladies must get behind this bill and push it." The fight is not over yet. It is only started, and we need your efforts."

"We will not stop until we get everything that we want," was the reply.

DISMISS BORDER STREET PETITION

At a hearing before the Railroad Commissioners to-day George A. Sweetser, counsel for the East Boston Railroad Company, asked that its petition for the widening of Border street be dismissed. There was no opposition and the hearing was closed. General Manager Sergeant of the West End Street Railway Company appeared in behalf of the petition for a location in Mystic avenue, Somerville, and Chelsea street and Broadway in Everett. No opposition was heard.

Hearings were also given on locations to the Fitchburg & Leominster line in Fitchburg; on the Boston & Northern in Broadway at Everett avenue, Chelsea; Old Colony in Fall River, Haverhill & Amesbury in Haverhill; and the Sprinfield Street Railway Company on private land in Springfield.

KING JUBILANT; GREAT VICTORY WON BY SPAIN

MADRID, Aug. 19.—A cablegram in cipher received at the offices of the Minister of War caused a hurried consultation with King Alfonso to-day and led to the popular belief that the Spanish forces in Morocco had won a great victory.

Whatever was the import of the dispatch, King Alfonso called for one of his automobiles and took a long ride through the city, chatting gaily with his aide and apparently feeling less the cares of state than he has for a long time.

General Marina has moved against the Moors, co-operating with other troops which had previously been transported to Cabo de Agua and other coast towns. It is reported that the Moors are becoming discouraged over the lack of success which has attended their campaign. In the Spanish forts and blockhouses, where troops have been cooped up for weeks, the situation is serious.

The tribesmen, securely hidden about the crags of Mount Gorugu, accompany their fire with shouts of derision and epithets. They no longer attack the Spanish outposts, which, the Spaniards think, is an indication that they have lost courage. Water is scarce at the outposts and has to be carried ten miles from Melilla.

3 BOLD THUGS BEAT CHINAMAN

The police are looking for three young men who in broad daylight entered the laundry of Yee Lee at No. 86 Minden street, Roxbury, beat the proprietor senseless and attempted to rifle a small safe which he kept under the counter in the outer store. The cries of Mrs. Mabel Carlton, who witnessed the attack from her house across the street, frightened the men away. She gave the police a good description of the trio.

According to Yee Lee, he was alone in the shop when the three men entered. All appeared to have been drinking. One threw a collar on the floor to divert his attention, while another leaped over the counter, took a piece of marble used for resting the iron on and struck him on the head. The next thing Yee Lee knew policemen were bending over him. Though badly used up, Yee Lee refused to go to the hospital.

Mrs. Carlton says that the men were between twenty-four and twenty-seven. She had seen them hanging around the vicinity for several days.

PROVIDENCE BELLE WED IN ATTLEBORO

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 19.—Miss Ruby Healey, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, slipped away to Attleboro to-day and was married to James J. Gordon of No. 103 Althea street, Providence. Miss Healey, who is nineteen years old and a handsome brunette, applied to Father Haney of the Church of the Assumption for a permit to marry in Attleboro, which was granted. The couple went to the parish house in Attleboro, where they were married by Fr. McCarthy.

MATRON BARKER RESIGNS.

Miss Mary Barker, for the past year and one-half matron at th Cambridge tuberculosis camp at Mount Auburn, resigned today. Miss Catherine McGregor, a graduate of the Frost Hospital School, was selected by the Board of Health to fill the vacancy.

WOMAN GETS INJUNCTION IN BONDS FIGHT

Mrs. Alezene L. Hadlock, of Brookline, was to-day granted a temporary injunction restraining Charles J. Gorman, president and treasurer of the Gorman Amusement Company, from disposing of $3,500 worth of bonds which she alleges he obtained from her by false statements. The injunction was granted by Judge Dana in the Superior Court and it also restrains the Bay State Trust Company, in whose possession the bonds are, from disposing of them. The injunction further restrains Mabel L. Filliebrown from transferring a mortgage of $3,800 which she executed for Gorman.

Mrs. Hadlock declares that she has invested $15,000 in the Gorman Amusement Company and given the money to Gorman. She says that a short time ago he came to her and said that he was threatened with an action for breach of promise, and that unless he settled the amusement company would be wrecked and Mrs. Hadlock would come in for an undue amount of notoriety. He also told Mrs. Hadlock, she says, that he had been arrested on the charge. She says that she gave him $3,500 in bonds of the National Railroad of Mexico. Later, she declares, she learned that Gorman had never been arrested.

An order returnable August 24 was issued, at which time the case will be heard further.

IN WITH 623 NEW CITIZENS

The Cunard liner Ivernia arrived here to-day from Liverpool with one of the healthiest looking lot of immigrants that ever came over. There were 623 steerage passengers. Not one was ill on the way over, barring the inevitable sea sickness. Dr. M. Jenkins, the Ivernia's surgeon, had the easiest voyage of his career.

The saloon passengers numbered 126, the second cabin 253. The total passenger list was 1,002. Among the saloon passengers was Professor Arlo Bates of the English department at Tech; J. Borelli, the artist, who returns from a tour abroad, and P. B. Magrane and Mrs. Magrane of Boston and Lynn.

The Ivernia just dodged the coastwise storm, getting only three hours of fog out of the whole nasty weather.

O'CONNOR FIRM GROWS.

DIVORCE SUIT STANDS, SAYS ACTOR'S WIFE

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Mary Mannering, the wife of James K. Hackett, who has just returned from the Continent, said:

"The report that my divorce proceedings have been withdrawn surprises me. They certainly have not been withdrawn by my instructions. I placed the entire matter in the hands of my lawyer, and if he has taken such action I should think he would have cabled me to that effect. Certainly I know nothing about a withdrawal of the suit.

"Any talk about a reconciliation between myself and Mr. Hackett is futile. It will never take place. The same conditions which resulted in my instituting suit for divorce continue and you may say that there is not the slightest chance of a reconciliation."

Miss Mannering will sail for New York on the Campania, Sunday. Her managers have cabled her that they have a fine, strong play in which she will appear about the middle of October. While in Europe she has secured the play "Every Woman," based on "Every Man."

She intends to produce this later. She will also appear in Shakespearean roles.

Kidney Disease

If you have the slightest trace of Kidney Disease, read what Mr. G. P. Fenstermacker, of Catawissa, Pa., says about his recovery from a serious attack of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, which nearly proved fatal, by taking Warner's Safe Cure:

"Two years ago I was taken sick. I had pain in my back, could not sleep and had no appetite. Our family doctor told me I had kidney trouble. He gave me some pills and other medicine. They did not help me. I also took ten bottles of a well known patent medicine without receiving any relief. Then my water stopped on me and I had to go to the doctor three or four times a day to have it drawn. That was awful in cold nights. Then I took all kinds of stuff without relief. By this time I was a total wreck. A friend gave me one of Warner's booklets and it took my eye. I ordered three bottles of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. After I took one bottle my water commenced running, and I said 'Thank God for Warner's Safe Cure.' After taking the third bottle I went to work and never lost a day since, and I took three bottles more. I am 68 years old and weigh 174 pounds. I look like a young man of 45, thanks to Warner's Safe Cure.

"You can use this if you like. I am working at the car shop for the P. & N. R. R. Co. Any person can see me there or come to my house, 239 Pine St." G. P. FENSTERMACKER, Catawissa, Pa.

ANALYSIS FREE

If you have any doubt as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine, putting your name and address on the package, to our Medical Department, and we will analyze it and send you a report, with advice and medical booklet, free.

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off and this causes Rheumatism, Backache, Gout, Diabetes and Bright's Disease. Warner's Safe Cure drives out the uric acid and prevents and cures all forms of kidney disease.

Constipation and Billousness

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS, purely vegetable, sugar-coated, absolutely free from injurious substances, a perfect laxative, cure Indigestion, Billiousness, Torpid Liver and Constipation. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25 cents a box.

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE. To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will cure them, a trial bottle and a sample box of Warner's Safe Pills will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Boston American.

FREE TO THE SICK

This month free consultation and examination without feeling of the pulse or receiving any information from the patient. Will tell your disease at a glance, whether it is curable or not, and what course to pursue. I have now been in Boston for 35 years, and in Salem for 5 years. Hundreds have been cured, in Boston, Salem, Peabody Danvers, Beverly and other cities. Why not you? Talk with those who have been cured of tumors, cancers, kidney trouble, diabetes, Bright's disease, cystitis, bladder diseases, indigestion, dyspepsia, female complaints, fits, dropsy, and, in fact, all chronic diseases. This is your chance. No matter what other doctors say, or if hospitals turn you away, call and see Dr. Liverpool, at No. 589 Tremont St., every day except Wednesdays and Thursdays, or at 219 Essex st., Salem, on every Wednesday and Thursday. Rooms 9-10. Main office, 589 Tremont St., Boston. Telephone Tremont 1723-1, Hours 10-4, 7-8. Sundays 10-2.

As one grows old the bowels grow less active. Some then take harsh cathartics, and their bowels harden. Then they multiply the dose. Some take candy Cascarets. They act in natural ways, and one tablet a day is sufficient.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED MRS. B. CHANDLER

Mrs. Grace Stecher Chandler of New Jersey has received her decree of absolute divorce from Byron D. Chandler, the "Million-Dollar Kid" of Boston and elsewhere, who is now the husband of Grace La Rue Chandler, the actress.

Dispatches from New York to-day say that Justice Amend has signed the final decree for the plaintiff. Mrs. Chandler is given the right to resume her maiden name. The decree contains the provision that she may ask for alimony later if she wishes.

Chandler is forbidden to marry again during the lifetime of the plaintiff. This is operative only in New York State, however. As Chandler has, according to his own statement, married Grace La Rue, presumably in some other State than New York, this second marriage holds good.

Mrs. Chandler No. 1 is an attractive little woman with deep blue eyes and wavy brown hair. She is in her twenties. She was married to Chandler about six years ago in Bermuda. The bride's family, the Stechers of New Jersey, did not approve, and there was an estrangement between the bride and her parents.

Suit Brought in February.

The first Mrs. Chandler began her divorce action early this year. Notice of the suit was served on Chandler, February 4, in the New York Central depot at Buffalo as Chandler stepped off from a train. The complaint accused him of misconduct with a young woman in the Auditorium Annex Hotel, Chicago, and at other places between November 12, 1908, and the time the notice was served. The name of the young woman was carefully suppressed.

Testimony was taken in the suit before a referee in New York on April 6 and 7. The testimony satisfied the referee that Mrs. Chandler was entitled to divorce on the only grounds that New York recognizes. Justice Gerard signed on May 10 the interlocutory decree which has just become absolute.

While the name of the woman who was mentioned in the suit was kept concealed, Mrs. Grace Stecher Chandler made a significant remark when she was told last June that Chandler had married Grace La Rue. She said:

"I do not believe that Byron Chandler will ever marry the woman who caused me to divorce him."

Danced in Boston.

Grace La Rue was the divorced wife of Sam Burke, a comedian. She was last seen in Boston in a professional way when she played the role of Angeline De Vere, a musical comedy queen in "Nearly a Hero" at the Majestic last September. She sang "My Sahara Belle" and danced with sinuous grace. It was said that her performance did much to captivate Chandler.

She and Chandler went abroad, and after much dispute, the report that they were married was confirmed by Chandler from London. They came back to New York last month on the Mauretania. On the voyage Chandler had an encounter with George B. Mackay of Los Angeles, and as Chandler told it, threatened to "smash the face" of Mackay, the Duke of Sutherland, the Vicompte de Sevaille and John R. Fowler of St. Louis, because he thought a song they sang reflected on his wife. Another version was that Mackay threatened to throw Chandler overboard if he was not a good boy.

KILLED STEALING RIDE.

NEW LONDON, Ct., Aug. 19.—Michael Joyce of Providence, in stealing a ride on the fast mail train from Boston to New York, broke his neck and died, alighting near here early to-day.

PRETTY BRIDE, WHOSE LOVE WAS WON BY A SONG

Mrs. John J. Terry, nee Lillian McCarthy.

John J. Terry of Dorchester and his pretty bride, who was formerly Miss Lillian McCarthy of the same district, are today receiving the congratulations of friends on the happy culmination of a pretty romance which had its inception when they met each other as members of the cast in the minstrel show given by the Dorchester Catholic Club last February.

The groom is twenty-five years of age and the bride twenty-two. They were married by the Rev. Hugh Blunt at the rectory of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, No. 12 Elm street.

Both are well known in amateur theatricals. Terry has appeared in the minstrel shows of the Dorchester Club for several years. This year his bride and he played together in the club's minstrel show, presenting a sketch entitled "Shine on, Harvest Moon," in which they sang the popular love song. Both declare that their romance dates from that time.

TALL FLAGPOLE CRASHES TO ROOF

The fifty-foot flagpole on the roof of the Leopold Morse Building broke off today and fell on the roof with a crash. Thirty-five feet of the small end hung over the coping into Brattle street. But for the two supports at its base the pole would have gone to the street. The noise startled the guests in the Quincy House. The police shut off Brattle street from trolley traffic till the pole was hauled back on the roof.

MISCREANT CUT OUT TWO COLTS' TONGUES

Police officers and agents of the S. P. C. A. to-day began an investigation of a strange case of brutality in Brighton. Someone cut out the tongues of two young colts in a pasture off Western avenue, the property of Jamieson Brothers, stablemen. H. C. Ralston discovered their condition Saturday morning. It is thought that the deed was done for spite.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Deposed Shah Tries To Kill Young Ruler.

ROME—According to Teheran advices, Ahmed Mirza, the young Shah of Persia, did not try to commit suiside, as was reported. But his father, Mohammed Ali, the deposed Shah, tried to murder him, stabbing him with a dagger. It seemed to be arranged that the deposed Shah should leave Teheran for Russia on Tuesday, but he is in Teheran still. On August 12 it was reported by way of St. Petersburg that the little Shah was plunged in youthful woe at the prospect of parting forever from his parents, that he tried to run away, and that when his flight was frustrated the attempted suicide. Next day a dispatch had it that the small "Shah of Shahs" would be married soon and that his household was being arranged. The juvenile "ruler" protests strongly against marrying. In effect the dispatches have pictured the "King of Kings" as crying and sobbing: "I—I want my mamma and papa—I—don't want any wives."

Farley Notes Irish Prosperity.

QUEENSTOWN — Archbishop Farley of New York, before sailing for home on the Caronia, said he was greatly gratified to learn that Irish immigration to the United States had decreased considerably. He trusted that Irish industrial progress and land legislation would accomplish still more toward keeping the Irish at home. He also expressed the hope that Cardinal Logue and Bishop Brown would be able to attend the next session of the Eucharistic Congress, as Americans would be delighted to meet them again.

To Follow Roosevelt Trail.

LONDON—John T. McCutcheon of Chicago and Fred M. Stephenson, son of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin, are in London making preparations for an African hunting expedition for big game. The party will be joined at Naples next week by Mr. C. E. Akeley of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, who is going out in quest of five live elephants for the museum. They will follow Mr. Roosevelt's route through Uganda, then make their way through Victoria Nyanza and come down the Nile.

General Booth May Lose an Eye.

LONDON — General William Booth of the Salvation Army, who started from London on July 14 for a religious tour of the provinces, has been compelled to return, owing to trouble with his eyes. Mr. Higgins, the first surgeon oculist at Guy's Hospital, stated that the aged Salvationist's trouble was due to septic poison. There is some fear that he will lose the affected eye, in which case the other eye will be operated on for a cataract.

Prince Seeks an Heiress.

GENEVA—Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar, who was recently obliged to relinquish his right to the Duchy because of his heavy debts and changed his title to Count Ostheim, intends to go to America in search of a wife with millions. He has openly boasted that he will return to Germany within a year and pay his debts out of his new wife's dower. The Prince is now staying at Zurich, anxiously awaiting funds from his family.

Lights Went Out; 20 Killed.

LONDON—A dispatch from Lecco, Italy, to the Daily Telegraph says that as a result of a short circuit the town of Olginate, which is supplied with electricity from Lecco, was suddenly plunged into darkness, and the residents of the place who tried to manipulate the switches in their houses received terrible shocks. Twenty persons are known to have been killed and many others injured.

France to Tax U. S. Goods.

PARIS — Replying to questions by a deputation of the Republican Committee of Commerce, M. Dupuy, the new Minister of Commerce, said the new American tariff would certainly cause the abrogation of the existing customs convention between France and the United States. The French general tariff, he declared, would be fully applied to American imports which formerly enjoyed the minimum tariff.

Agamemnon Is Refloated.

LONDON—The British battleship Agamemnon, which went ashore yesterday on Longsands, off the estuary of the Thames river, was refloated to-day. Four powerful tugs pulled the Agamemnon from her perilous position.

Wright to Fly in England.

LONDON—Orville Wright, who started for Berlin yesterday, will return in two weeks in order to make aeroplane flights under government auspices for the instruction of British military aviators.

NEWPORT MAYOR A SUFFRAGIST

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—The announcement was made to-day that Mayor Boyle will preside at the first of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's woman's suffrage lectures to be held in her home, "Marble House." Governor Pothier will preside at the second meeting on August 28. Mrs. Belmont is busy with secretaries attending to every detail for the two meetings. In explaining why she works herself in arranging for the meetings, Mrs. Belmont said: "This great cause needs workers, warriors. Money is necessary of course, but too often a mere contribution in a cause like this from a wealthy woman is like throwing a bone to a dog—one cares little for the bone and less for the dog. I want to be a stimulus to others and make these lectures a success."

G. A. R. OFFICIAL BANNER STOLEN

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Aug. 19.—The standard of the Grand Army of the Republic, which has been carried for the last twenty years by the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, and has been the official banner of every encampment since 1889, has been missing since the parade of the veterans, Aug. 11, and it is feared it has been stolen. When last seen it was floating over the reviewing stand. The flag was presented to the Grand Army in 1889 in Milwaukee.

Reduce Your Fat Free!

Costs Nothing To Try.

This Illustration Plainly Shows What Rengo Has Done For Others. Why Not You?

A quick, harmless reducer of fat, called Rengo, has come into popular use, which far eclipses any method of treatment heretofore used.

Rengo is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take, and it is chewed like fruit or candy. It causes a gradual, harmless but effective reduction in weight, and without leaving wrinkles, which are nearly always present after taking drugs and other dangerous materials commonly called "anti-fats."

There is nothing "just as good" as Rengo.

For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full sized box, or by mail prepaid, by The Rengo Co., 3212 Rengo Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The Company will gladly send you a trial package free by mail, if you will write them direct to Detroit; no free packages at drug stores.

Rengo is for sale in Boston by Riker-Jaynes drug stores, 7 in Boston; Houghton & Dutton Co.; Henry Siegel Co., Washington and Essex Sts.; Woodward Drug Co., 100 Tremont St.; W. B. Hunt Co., 707 Washington St., 655 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, and 3 Pleasant St., Malden.

EASY TO REFUTE NEW RELIGION OF DR. ELIOT, DECLARES THE POPE

ROME, Aug. 19.—The address delivered by Charles W. Eliot at the Harvard Summer School of Theology on "The Religion of the Future" has been translated by the Pope's order into Italian that he might more thoroughly comprehend it.

The translation, which was most accurately done, was read with great care by the Pontiff, who expressed profound regret that a man of such authority and culture as Dr. Eliot should spread theories that, he said, were not, in fact, a basis for the new religion of the future, but a negation of faith and the principles which were the foundation of Christianity and of modern civilization.

The Pope is reported to have said that it would be easy to refute and destroy Dr. Eliot's arguments, and highly praised Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, Bishop McFaul of Trenton and other American ecclesiastics who had hastened to the defence of their Church and faith.

It is believed that a semi-official reply to Dr. Eliot's address on lines suggested by the Pope himself will apear in The Civitta Cattolica, the most representative Catholic magazine. It is managed by the Jesuits, and Fr. Salvatore Brandi, an American citizen, is the editor.

In an address before the Harvard Summer School of Theology on July 22, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, outlined his idea of the new religion in substance, as follows:

"The new religion will not be based upon authority, either spiritual or temporal; the present generation is ready to be led, but not driven. As a rule, the older Christian Churches have relied on authority. But there is now a tendency toward liberty and progress, and among educated men this feeling is irresistible. In the new religion there will be no personification of natural objects; there will be no deification of remarkable human beings, and the faith will not be racial or tribal.

"The new religion will admit no sacraments, except natural, hallowed customs, and it will deal with natural interpretations of such rites. Its priests will strive to improve social and industrial conditions. It will not attempt to reconcile people to present ills by the promise of future compensation. I believe the advent of just freedom for mankind has been delayed for centuries by such promises. Prevention will be the watchword of the new religion, and a skillful surgeon will be one of its ministers. It cannot supply consolation as offered by old religions, but it will reduce the need of consolation.

"The new religion will laud God's love, and will not teach condemnation for the mass of mankind. The true end of all religion and philosophy is to teach man to serve his fellow man, and this religion will do this increasingly. It will not be bound by dogma or creed; its workings will be simple, but its field of action limitless. Its discipline will be the training in the development of co-operative good will."

"ABSURD," FARLEY SAYS OF ELIOT'S "NEW RELIGION"

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Aug. 19.—Archbishop Farley of New York, who sailed from here for New York on the Caronia, when told of the "new religion" outlined by President Eliot of Harvard, declared it to be "too absurd for anything."

"There was never a religion of that kind," declared the Archbishop, when Cardinal Logue told him of what President Eliot had said. "There is no philosophy that does not contemplate the supernatural.

"This man thinks that America is going to do in the twentieth century what will never be done—a thing too preposterous—and he has no authority to talk upon a matter of that kind. He is a layman, but has got an idea that he knows everything, I suppose."

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

LEXINGTON PARK BETTER AFTER RAIN

The Sunday American Outing Club with free tickets of admission to Lexington Park can use them on Friday and have the same old round of fun as though Tuesday was not the worst day of the summer from a weather standpoint. Lexington Park is fresh, green and wholesome after the long storm and the holders of the BOSTON AMERICAN free tickets will attend to-morrow in greater numbers than ever before this year. Inside the park there are free attractions waiting on every hand and even the paid attractions are very reasonable in price. Use the free tickets on Friday and see next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN for more.

SCHOOL days are the days when most of the important habits of life are formed. Teach your children the daily use of and they will some day rise to call you blessed. It cleanses, beautifies and preserves the teeth and imparts purity and fragrance to the breath.

BOSTON GIRL WILL SING IN RICHEST CHOIR IN WORLD

Miss Rosamond Dixey.

LENOX, Aug. 19.—The richest choir in the world, the members representing millions of dollars will be heard during the next few Sundays in the fashionable Trinity Episcopal Church here. Many of the wealthiest residents of the Summer colony have volunteered their services while the choir boys are on their vacations. The volunteers are either possessed of great fortunes or are heirs to millions.

Among those who will sing next Sunday, and probably for several Sundays later, are Miss Gertrude Parsons, Miss Constance Folsom, Mrs. David T. Dana, Mrs. Isabelle Shotter, Miss Helen Alexandre, Miss Civilese Alexandre, Miss Emily Winthrop, Miss Katherine Lawrence, Miss Beatrice Crosby, Miss Eleanor Crosby, Miss Cornelia Barnes, Miss Charlotte Cram, Miss Helen Flint, Miss Patience Crosby, Miss Constance Crosby, Miss Evelyn Lowen, Miss Lucy Peters, Miss Agnes Cameron, Miss Alice Appleton, Miss Heloise Meyer, Miss Rosamond Dixey, Miss Mary Stanley, Mrs. Edward Witherspoon, William G. Clifford, Chester W. Borden, Clifford White, William Cameron, W. B. O. Field, Herbert Terrill, Samuel Frothingham, Richard C. Greenleaf and Frederick Schneck.

STRONG BILLS OFFERED AT PLAYHOUSES

The daring balancing act of Harry De Coe at Keith's is different from the war game. There is no theorizing in it. It is actually sensational.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" is receiving a splendid production at the Orpheum. Manager Morison has acceded to repeated requests, and will continue it next week.

"The Final Settlement" is drawing finely at the Grand Opera House. Next week's drama will be "On Trial for His Life."

Lydia Dreams, the ventriloquist; the musical Bakers, Marion and Welser, comedy acrobats, and Greta Byron, comedienne, are on the Globe bill.

With the exception of "The Great Powers," the mystifying hypnotist, the entire bill at the New Palace is changed to-day for the week.

Park Theatre Opening.

Emmett Corrigan in "Keegan's Pal" will open the Park Theatre season on Thursday, September 2, instead of on Labor Day, as first announced.

Robert Edeson and a strong supporting company will open the Hollis season Labor Day.

Rapley Holmes in "The Round Up" begins the 1909-1910 season at the Colonial Theatre Labor Day.

"Daniel Boone," with its historic and thrilling scenes, is the attraction at the Bowdoin Square. Next week brings "Fallen Among Thieves."

Giovanni's performing monkeys, Tom Thumb, the smallest horse on earth, and Alvera's trained cats make interesting animal features on Austin & Stone's bill.

The Howard Athenaeum opens Monday for the season of burlesque, with the Yankee Doodle Girls as the initial attraction.

At the Premier.

Cameraphone songs, scenes and stories are a feature of the bill at the Premier. Robert Vanni and Signor Fontaine are on the list, too.

Both land and water fireworks will be shown at Paragon Park Saturday night in one of the greatest pyrotechnic displays ever given there.

The bill at Norumbega Park includes the artistic Zingari Singers, Gardner Eldridge and company, Taneen and Claxton, the Four Imperials and Bert Jordan.

The Florenz Troupe of gymnasts, Elizabeth Otto and Katherine Nelson, the Alfred Brothers and Mimic Four are features at Medford Boulevard Theatre.

The steamer Cape Cod makes daily trips from Boston to Provincetown, leaving at 9 a. m. from Bay Line Wharf, No. 400 Atlantic avenue.

There are heavy sailings on the steamers of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Steamship Line from Boston to Yarmouth this Summer.

The special trolley which leaves Post-office square at 2.30 p. m. daily, except Sunday, for Providence and Fall River, traverses the country over which the war game has just been played. Connections are made with New York boats.

Boat for North Shore.

Tourists at the North Shore and Gloucester find the steamer Cape Ann a delightful means of travel in this Summer season.

Big catches are reported from the daily trips of the fishing steamer Satellite to the deep sea grounds.

There is heavy travel on the Joy line, which gives a combined boat and rail journey from Boston to New York.

Patrons of Captain Ed Dixon's deep sea fishing steamer King Philip are making good catches of cod and haddock.

Bass Point boats, running from Otis wharf on nearly hourly schedule, give an invigorating ride to pleasant Summer resorts.

The Point of Pines, with its new hotel attractions, is sought by motorists and other pleasure parties this vacation season.

The Lyman Howe "Travel Festivals" are drawing thousands to Tremont Temple every afternoon and evening.

SENATOR FROM MISSOURI SEES THE PRESIDENT

BEVERLY, Aug. 19.—President Taft played golf at the Myopia Club to-day with his brother, Charles P. Taft, and Captain Archibald Butt, his military aid. He had but one appointment to-day, and that was with Senator Warner of Missouri.

Mr. Warner was chairman of the notification committee at the national Republican convention, and he is prominent in Republican politics. He has been spending a few weeks at Nahant, and will soon return to the West. Senator Warner was formerly commander of the G. A. R. of Missouri, and the Essex County G. A. R. has requested him to urge the President to try to arrange to review the parade of that organization, which will be held on September 11.

Charley Taft is none the worse to-day after his automobile accident of yesterday. His auto, however, is badly smashed up. The top of the machine has been sent to New York to be repaired, and Charley's chauffeur is working on the rest of the machine. The youngster says that the accident didn't feaze him and that he'll be touring on the North Shore just as soon as the auto is whole again. Meanwhile he is devoting his time to his boat, the Bandit.

$200 DOG THEFT LAID TO PRISONER

Patrick Sullivan of No. 6 Blossom street, Brighton, was arrested early to-day on a warrant charging him with stealing two Boston terrier dogs valued at $100 each. One of the animals belongs to Harold Goodenough of No. 120 Foster street, while the other is owned by Jonathan Monroe of No. 125 Washington street, Brighton. Another man is sought.

TWO WOMEN HANG SELVES SAME DAY

WORCESTER, Aug. 19.—Two women killed themselves by hanging within a few hours of each other near here within the past twenty-four hours. Mrs. Anna Bourne, thirty-eight years old, hanged herself in the basement of her home in Leominster, by throwing a piece of black tape around an overhead pipe. She was despondent because her sister is dying of tuberculosis. Mrs. Mary A. Laurent hanged herself in Manchaug to a wardrobe hook.

BURGLAR ALARM CAUSES SCARE

The Chelsea police received a scare early to-day when the burglar alarm connected with the Chelsea Trust Company went off. Three patrolmen were rushed post haste to the trust company's quarters at Broadway and Everett street, expecting to catch some bank thieves. They surrounded the place and had Edward H. Lowell, the cashier summoned. A thorough search of the place was conducted, but nobody could be found. An electrician discovered that the alarm was caused by a crossed wire.

TOMORROW BANNER DAY FOR SOCIETY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Like the lull before an approaching storm is the quiet at most of the resorts and haunts of society to-day, for has not August 20 been set down in the social calendar as one of the gayest days in all the month at Bar Harbor and Newport, at Manchester and Pride's Crossing? besides the various dinners and luncheons and the tennis tournaments, the smaller dances and parties at Newport that have been crowded into the day, the ball at the Casino in honor of the tennis players comes in the evening, together with a dinner and informal dance at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who have been abroad, and because of their long absence will draw more than the usual number of fashionables. Then Mrs. Barger Wallach is to give a luncheon for eighty guests at the home of her father in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Jeannie Wallach.

* * *

At Bar Harbor the most important event will undoubtedly be the horse show, which was put over to this date on account of the recent storm. All the members of the smart set have taken boxes and will be present at almost any cost. Another Bar Harbor function to which all the elect will wish to throng is the interesting vocal recital by M. Onmiroff at the Summer residence of Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, who is a sister of Henry M. Whitney of Brookline. The recital will begin at 4 o'clock. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock and Mrs. Walter S. Gurnee.

At Manchester Cove, one of the treats will be the first in a series of German readings from Baumbach's "Sommermarchen," which Fraulein Marie Wolters is to give at 11 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitehouse. Fraulein Wolters is the North Shore resident to whom Japan has recently shown such signal honor, sending her a letter and a memorial cup of rare design, in token of her efforts in behalf of the famine sufferers.

* * *

The opening of the big lawn tennis tournament at Newport yesterday was remarkably well attended, in spite of the threatening skies and heavy atmosphere, and society in its gayest and prettiest outdoor apparel assembled in large numbers. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Miss Anna Sands, Mrs. Robert L. Gerry, the Warren Whitneys, the Newton Adamses, Miss Sallie Thayer, Miss Vera Gilbert, the Arthur Iselins, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Phelps Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Austen Gray, Miss Katheryn Lawrence, Miss Jeannie Wallach, the Elisha Dyers, Prescott Lawrence, Stanley Mortimer, William Sands, Robert Walton Goelet, Duke of Vallombrosa of Paris, Vicomte de Fenelon and Count Antonelli of Rome.

Austen Gray, who married Alice Burnham of this city, is one of the committee of four who are in charge of the ball at the Newport Casino, which is to be given tomorrow in honor of the players in the tennis tournament.

One of the nice philanthropies on a small scale for which some of the Lenox smart set are responsible these last weeks in August is the volunteer service in the choir on the last two Sundays of the month, which has been offered by Miss Rosamond Dixey of Boston and Miss Heloise Meyer, sister of Secretary Meyer. They have rich contralto voices, and with Mrs. Edward Witherspoon, wife of the director, will constitute the altos.

The sopranos will be Misses Gertrude Parsons, Constance Folsom, Alice Appleton, Cornelia Barnes, Charlotte Cram, Beatrice and Eleanor Crosby, Katherine Lawrence, Emily Winthrop, Helen and Civilese Alexandre, Isabel Shotter and Mrs. David Turner Dana; basses, Frederick Schenck, William B. Osgood Field, Samuel Frothingham and Richard C. Greenleaf, Jr. while Chester Griswold Burden will sing tenor. The choir is holding three rehearsals this week.

Count von Moltke, the Minister from Denmark, is registered at the Wolcott in New York, since his return from Denmark. He was met at the boat by the Countess, formerly Cornelia Thayer of this city.

William P. Wharton and Philip Wharton of Boston are at the Curtis Hotel, Lenox.

The third round in the tennis championship singles at Bar Harbor, which were to have come off yesterday, were held over until to-day on account of rain.

Mrs. Robert Winthrop gave a dinner at Ethelwyn at Lenox last evening for Mrs. Paul Dalgren.

G. Newell Hurd of Milton is at the Malvern, Bar Harbor, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Hosea Starr Ballou of Brookline.

Postmaster General Hitchcock, who has been spending the Summer at Beverly, has gone to Toledo to attend the Postmasters' Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana of Dana's Beach, Manchester-by-the-Sea, have been entertaining Mrs. Charles de Rham, whose country place is at Cold Springs, New York.

Mrs. George H. Chickering of Milton is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. George Livingstone Nichols at Alderbrook, Katonah, N. Y.

The Philip H. Bremers, who Summer at Manchester-by-the-Sea, and Mrs. Henry Hurd of Magnolia are touring New Hampshire, passing through New Castle yesterday.

Six boats have been eliminated from the international match between the German and American boats off Marblehead. They include "Max" Agassiz's Alarm, C. H. W. Foster's Bandit, George C. Thomas, Jr.'s Bessie, F. B. Crowninshield's Demon, Herbert M. Sears's Eel, Richard de B. Boardman's Lady, Lawrence F. Percival's Sally X., Vice Commodore F. Lewis Clark's Spokane III., J. Brooks Nichols's Vim and R. L. Agassiz's Wag.

"Charlie" Taft was an interested spectator at the trials, having come down in a knockabout. Later he went aboard the Sylph, the President's yacht, which brought down others of the President's family to witness the races.

The Lenox library has just been increased 103 volumns, the gift of Mrs. Carlos de Heredia, in memory of her father, Henry H. Cook of New York.

THAW DENIED ALL FAVORS AT ASYLUM

FISHKILL, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Denied the privileges recommended by Justice Mills in his decision declaring him insane, Harry K. Thaw to-day began the monotonous asylum life at Matteawan, and the papers of his recommitment were filed at the hospital desk.

Thaw to-day received the same treatment accorded him before the hearing at White Plains. He occupies the same room given to him before. He is forced to associate with insane persons and none of the privileges asked for him has been granted.

Thaw's wish was for a room on the lower floor of the institution which would enable him to keep away from the ward where the insane patients afflicted with tuberculosis were confined.

National Shoe Stores, Sweet 16 Summer St.

$1.00 $1.69 $1.95

CAUTION TO PUBLIC—Since opening our Retail Shoe Store, which is the largest in Greater Boston, we have had quite a few imitators of our newspaper announcements. Our would-be competitors wait until our ads appear in the papers and then copy our prices. They also have gone as far as to copy our signs in color. The prices they quote after seeing ours are misleading, since they place them upon inferior goods.

We are big manufacturers and control more high grade shoe factories than any other organization in this part of the country, so it is possible for us to give high values at low prices, and when we quote a price it means a tremendous bargain. WE ARE LEADERS, not followers.

Since opening our big underpriced basement department, we have had more satisfied customers in a given time than other shoe stores that have been running for years.

CITIZENS PERSECUTED BY POLICE, SAY O'MEARA REFUSES THEM REDRESS

Abner T. Porter, who is a janitor at No. 242 Massachusetts avenue, and looks after ten apartment houses in the vicinity, where he has lived six years, claims that on October 24, 1908, he was falsely and unlawfully arrested on a charge of drunkenness by Patrolman Arthur Homilton of Station 16, a new man on the route. He swore out a complaint at Police Headquarters, which was dismissed without a hearing. He swears he had not tasted liquor for several hours previous to the arrest, and claims he had several reputable witnesses who talked with him and saw all the details of his arrest. Porter says these men have known him several years and can corroborate his statements. Following is his story:

"On October 24, 1908, I was taking care of the heating apparatus at No. 220 and No. 222 Massachusetts avenue. The building is leased by John J. Murphy, who runs the liquor store at the corner of Norway street. About 11 o'clock that night I went to the barroom to get the keys of the basement in order to bank my fires. The keys were always hung in the barroom when not in use.

"One of the bartenders offered me a drink, which I declined. As I was passing through the wholesale department the clerk passed me a half pint of liquor, saying, 'You may want a nip to-morrow (Sunday).' I took the bottle and put it in my pocket. The seal of this bottle was intact when I was searched at the station house.

"When I reached the street after banking my fires, I met two other janitors of the vicinity and stopped to talk. Suddenly I received a rough push from behind, and truning I saw Officer Hamilton. 'Move along,' he said, gruffly, repeatedly pushing me.

Grabbed by Officer.

"'I have business on the street,' I replied. 'I am a janitor for several of these houses and I am waiting to put out the lights.'

"I went to the store at No. 232 and bought some underwear, which I took to my apartment. Meanwhile Hamilton had met another officer, according to my witnesses. Hamilton said to him, 'I have a good mind to go back and get that big ——.' The other officer answered, 'You had better leave him alone.'

"I was standing in the doorway of No. 242 when Hamilton reached in and grabbed me. 'What's the matter?' I asked. 'You're under arrest,' he said. 'What for?' 'For being drunk.'

"I went to the box quietly. While we were waiting for the wagon a gray-haired man stopped at the box. Hamilton gave him a push and told him to move on. The man was indignant. 'That officer ought to be reported,' he said. 'I must get his number.' I have not been able to obtain this man's name for a witness.

"When I climbed into the wagon the officer there, whom I knew, said, 'My God, Porter, what are you arrested for?' I told him. 'Let me look at you,' he said. Then he remarked, 'Well, I have nothing to say.'

"I also knew the officer who came to search me at the station. 'What are you doing here, Porter?' he asked. When I told him he looked wise, but said nothing. I asked the sergeant at the desk to examine me closely and see if I was drunk. He only ordered me to a cell. I told him that I had ten fires going and about one hundred people sleeping over them. I asked him to notify a janitor friend of mine to look after them. This was not done.

Demands a Hearing.

"I was taken to the city prison later and released from there about 11 o'clock the next day, after signing a paper which I was not given a chance to read. Mr. Palmer, my lawyer, who lives over me, saw the arrest and went to the station to bail me out. He was told that if he bailed me out I should have to appear in court Monday, whereas if I remained the legal number of hours in custody I would be released, no record being found against me. So he went away.

"On November 6 my lawyer at that time, Mr. Warren, sent a letter to Police Commissioner O'Meara, asking for a hearing. A reply came that a formal complaint would have to be sworn to and lodged at headquarters. This was done November 14. Nothing more was heard about it, so December 4 Mr. Warren again wrote to the commissioner, asking what had been done about the complaint. The commissioner replied that his finding was in the hands of his clerk, Leo A. Rogers. Mr. Warren went to headquarters and found that the complaint had been dismissed after an investigation by the commissioner, and that no hearing would be granted.

Claims Police Persecution.

Here is a letter from a man who has served twice as the representative of Ward 4, Charlestown, in the City Council:

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am located in Charlestown in the hardware, paint ad plumbing business, and am a citizen of Boston. In 1901-02 I represented Ward 4 in the City Council. I have no feeling against the police—there are some fine fellows among them—but I think the Commissioner is too light for the office. His judgment is not of the best. During my term at City Hall I was a friend of the police. I tried to raise their salary, as I did that of the fire department. My resolution was vetoed by Mayor Hart and wanted only one vote to pass over his veto.

I have been in business in Charlestown for twenty years and was inspector of plumbing under Mayor Fitzgerald for Wards 22 and 23. I feel I have the respect of all those who know me. I am trying to do business on Main street, Charlestown, in spite of the persecutors in the police department who are trying to stop me from delivering goods in my own wagons.

I feel that I would be doing an injustice to the public if such a case should not be brought to their attention. As the AMERCAN has the courage to tell the public that the Police Department hampers business and does not give justice where it belongs, I call it to your attention.

On April 14, 1909, I received a call from A. Cunio & Company, Cambridge, manufacturers of candy, to repair a water supply to a boiler carrying around two hundred pounds of steam. The steamfitters cut off the feed, leaving only a barrel tank to feed the boilers until a plumber could give them water. I refused at first to go, but when I was made to believe I was going to save property and possibly life, should the boiler go dry, I at once put all my tools and a supply of pipes and fittings in my democrat wagon and went as quickly as I could to the factory. I was about to go home, after the work was all done, when I was met by an officer, Jeremiah J. Crowley, who formerly lived in Malden, and a Boston officer named O'Connell.

Mr. Crowley said to me: "What is this team doing here so long?" I was so completely surprised by his insolent and uncalled for talk that my answer was given, I am sorry to say, in the same kind of language.

I said: "If you inquired you would find I was saving property and possibly human life." He said he would take me to court, which he did. I was summonsed to court on April 21. I made my statement and then Crowley and O'Connell swore that my team was an hour and twenty minutes standing in the street. My defence was that I left the place twice in that time and went to my store, which would leave the team at no one time standing twenty minutes.

I asked them where they were when I was first seen. They said they were standing in front of the terminal station in Sullivan square on the Alford street side, and saw me at a corner which is in front of the Stickney & Poor Spice Company factory. I challenged them in court and put the question to them several times, giving them a chance to take back the statement.

To see me at that point they would have to look through two blocks of houses, one on Sever street and the other on Cambridge street.

Judge Bragg fined me $20. I appealed. The case was heard by District Attorney Hill. He put it in the hands of Mr. Dwyer, who heard five witnesses which I produced, and then ordered it nolle prossed, saying he saw no reason for bringing me into court. I at once called on Police Commissioner O'Meara and asked a license for standing my horse in front of my place of business to deliver my goods.

He informed me he would not grant it to me. I asked him if he wanted to drive me out of business. He told me he did not care for me or my business, to leave his office and not to take up his time. I again asked for a permit. I refused to go until I received an answer of some kind.

He then advised me to go to the clerk's office and file an application for a wagon license, which I did at his request.

After several days I received a reply by letter that my request had been rejected. I then called him up on the 'phone and asked why I was refused. My answer was that he took pleasure in rejecting it. I then went to Station 15 and asked the captain to define the law.

While I was with the commissioner I asked him if a plumber is not doing emergency work if he is going to save property. My answer was, "Not at all. The Elevated wagon is the only emergency wagon of repair."

I insisted that they were wrong, and that a private citizen's property if flooding is as much an emergency, and more.

The captain and the commissioner displayed ignorance of the law.

I asked the Captain at that time to give me a blank so I could bring complaint against Crowley and O'Connell to prove to the citizens of Boston that these officers committed perjury in open court when they swore they saw me through a block of houses. The Captain refused. In my opinion Commissioner O'Meara is in incompetent and the AMERICAN has shown him to be so.

MISS ILLINGTON, WHO RODE ASTRIDE IN COAST RACE

Margaret Illington Frohman, actress and prospective divorcee.

RENO, Nev., Aug. 19.—The fifteen-day race meet under the auspices of the Nevada Jockey Club opened here in the presence of 5,000 people. Among the women visitors to the race track was Margaret Illington Frohman, famous actress and prominent member of the local divorce colony. She rode around the track on a $1,000 horse, which was sent here from New York at an expense of $340.

The actress and prospective divorcee was astride and wore a riding costume and brimmed hat suggestive of the cow-girl, and very picturesque. Her brother accompanied her.

CHAPTER VI.

The Fort of Hercules.

WHEN, after alighting from the train at Garavan, we came in silence to the bank of the sea, our eyes were immediately struck by a dazzling silhouette of a castle standing upon the peninsula of Hercules. The oblique rays of the sun which were falling upon the walls and the old Square Tower made the reflection of the tower glisten in the waters like a breastplate.

Upon the lower steps of the stairway which led up to one of the towers, we behld a slender, charming figure. It was Arthur Rance's wife, who had been the beautiful Edith Prescott.

The voice of the young wife was her greatest charm, although the grace of her entire being was perfect. Rouletabille and myself made an effort to tell her that we had intended to look for a stopping place in the village instead of trespassing upon her hospitality. She made a delicious little grimace, lifted her shoulders with a gesture that was almost childish, said that our rooms were all ready for us and changed the subject.

"Come, come! You haven't seen the chateau. You must see it—all of you. Oh, I will show you 'la Louve' another time. It is the only gloomy corner in the place. It is horrible—so cold and dismal. It makes me shiver. Oh, M. Rouletabille, you'll tell me stories that will make me shiver some day, won't you?"

And chattering thus, she glided in front of us in her white gown. She walked like an actress. She made a singularly pretty picture in this garden of the Orient, between the threatening old tower and the carved stone flowers of the ruined chapel.

In the Strange Castle

And at our left is the immense tower of the Twelfth Century, which, Mme. Edith tells us, the natives call "la Louve" and which nothing—neither time, nor man, nor peace, nor war, nor cannon, nor tempest—has ever been able to destroy. It is just as it appeared in 1107, when the Saracens, who sowed devastation in their wake, were able to make no headway in their attacks upon the Chateau of Hercules—just as it was seen by Salageri and his corsairs of Genoa, when, after they had seized the fort and the Square Tower and even the castle itself, it resisted attack, and its defenders held it until the arrival of the troops of the Prince of Provence, who delivered them. It was there that Mme. Edith had chosen to have her own rooms. We reached the postern.

"This is what we call the Gardener's Tower," said Edith, childishly. "From this gate one may see all the fort, and all the castle, both north and south. See!"

And she stretched her arms wide to emphasize her words.

"Every stone has its history. I'll tell them to you some day, if you are good."

The topographical plan of the Fort of Hercules is of the greatest importance in the proper understanding of the incredible events which were to occur so soon after our arrival at Rochers Rouges. I shall place at once before the eyes of the reader the general scheme of the buildings as it was traced by Rouletabille and myself.

The castle had been built in 1140 by the Seigneurs of Mortola. In order to isolate it completely from the land, they had not hesitated to make an island of the peninsula by cutting away the narrow isthmus which connected it with the mainland. Upon the mainland itself, they had built a barricade in the form of a semi-circular fortification, designed to protect the approaches to the drawbridge and the two entrance towers. Not a trace of this fortification was left. And the isthmus, in the course of the centuries, had again resumed its old form, the drawbridge had been thrown down and the trenches had filled up. The walls of the Chateau of Hercules followed the outline of the peninsula, which was that of an irregular hexagon. The walls were built upon the rocks, and the latter, in some places, extended over the waters in such a manner that a little ship might have taken shelter beneath them, fearing no enemy, while it was protected by this natural ceiling. This design of building was marvellously well adapted for defence, and gave the inmates of the fortress little reason to fear an attack, no matter from what quarter it might come.

The Towers

The fort was entered by way of the north gate, which guarded the two towers, connected by a passageway. These towers, which had suffered greatly during the last sieges of the Genoese, had been repaired to some slight extent some time afterward, and had, shortly before we came to Rochers Rouges, been made habitable by Mrs. Rance, who used them as servants' quarters. The front one of the tower served as the keeper's lodge. A little door opened in the side of the tower upon the passageway, and enabled anyone looking out to observe all those who came or went. A heavy double door of oak, with bands of iron, was no longer in use, its twin portals having stood for uncounted years open against the inner walls of the two towers, on account of the difficulty which had been experienced in managing them; and the entrance to the castle was only closed by a little gate, which anyone might open at will. This entrance was the only one by which it was possible to get into the Chateau. As I have said, in passing through this gate, one found himself in the first court, closed in on all sides by the walls of the towers. These walls were by no means as high as when they were built. The old high courtyards which connected the towers had been razed to the ground and replaced by a sort of circular boulevard, from which one mounted toward the first court by means of a little terrace. The boulevards were still crowned by a parapet. For the changes which I have described took place in the Fifteenth Century, at the time when every lord of the manor was obliged to consider the possibility of being obliged to meet an attack of artillery. As to the towers which had for a considerable time longer preserved their uniformity and their first height, and the pointed roofs of which had been replaced by a platform designed to support the artillery, they had later been razed to the height of the boulevard parapets, and their shape seemed almost like that of a half moon. These alterations had taken place in the Seventeenth Century, at the time of the construction of a modern castle, still known at the New Castle, although it had been in ruins for years when we first saw it.

Upon the flat platform roofs of these old towers—roofs which were surrounded by a parapet—palm trees had been planted, which had thriven ill, swept as they were by the sea winds and burned by the sun. When one leaned over the circular parapet which surrounded the whole domain it seemed to him as though the chateau were still as completely closed in as it was in the days when the courtyards reached to the second stories of the old towers. "La Louve," as I have said, had not been changed at all, but still reared its dark hulk against the blue waters of the Mediterranean, a strange, weird figure, looking thousands of years old. I have spoken also of the ruins of the chapel. The ancient commons had been transformed into the stables and the kitchens.

Old Bob's Quarters

One could only penetrate into the second enclosure through the postern, which Mrs. Arthur Rance called "the tower of the gardener," and which was actually only a pavilion. A moat and a wall entirely isolated the court.

The moat still exists, wide and deep, but the walls had been torn down all the length of the New Castle and replaced by the walls of the castle itself. A central door opened upon a bridge, which had been thrown over the moat, and which formerly permitted direct communication with the outer court. But this bridge had been torn down or was swallowed up in the waters, and as the windows of the castle, rising high above the moat, were still guarded by their heavy iron bars, one might readily believe that the inner court still remained as impenetrable as when it was entirely shut in by its enclosing walls at the time when the New Castle did not exist.

The pavement of the inner court—the Court of Charles the Bold—was a little higher than that of the outer court. The rocks formed there a very high seat, a natural pedestal of that colossal black column, the Old Castle, standing square and erect, as though it had been carved from a single block of stone, stretching its awesome shadow over the blue waters. One could only penetrate into the Old Castle (designated by F) by a little door, K. The old inhabitants of the country never spoke of it except as the Squire Tower, to distinguish it from the Round Tower, or the Tower of Charles the Bold, as they sometimes called the latter. A parapet similar to the one which closed in the outer court closed the inner court as firmly as the outer.

Of the chateau of the seventeenth century, known as the New Castle, they had only repaired two bed chambers on the first floor and a little sitting room for guests. It was to these that Rouletabille and myself were assigned, while M. and Mme. Robert Darzac were lodged in the Square Tower.

Two rooms, the windows of which opened upon the balcony, were reserved in this Square Tower for "Old Bob," who slept there. M. Stangerson was upon the first floor of "la Louve," in the rear of the suite occupied by the Rances.

Mme. Edith herself showed us to our rooms. She made us cross over the sunken ceilings of ruined apartments, over broken railings and tumble-down walls; but here and there some mouldy hangings, a broken statue or a ragged bit of tapestry, bore witness to the ancient splendors of the New Castle, born of the fantasies of some Mortola of the wonderful seventeenth century. But when we reached them, our littlee rooms recalled to us nothing of that magnificent past. They had been swept and garnished with a care that was almost touching.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, Aug. 19.—So many false reports regarding Harriman's health have been in circulation recently that if it was not for the heavy inside selling of Harriman shares they would be ignored. This selling is undoubtedly due to a determination to pay only the regular dividends this time on Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, and to pay only 4 per cent at any time on Union Pacific preferred. As exclusively stated in this column on several occasions, any payment on Union Pacific preferred beyond the regular 4 per cent. would be illegal and dishonest and would start litigation and a heavy selling movement in the market.

$ $ $

Harriman's health has been made such an important issue that the matter should be considered squarely once and for all, regardless of Mr. Harriman's personal feelings.

Harriman's death at this juncture might cause some temporary depression in the general market and some special and perhaps greater depression in the Harriman stocks. The assumption, however, that such a development could permanently affect the securities market of America or economic conditions, which still stand high, is too absurd to need discussion here.

The so-called Harriman interests are so completely interwoven with those of Morgan and other leaders in the great movement toward a readjustment of railway affairs that all of his most recent plans have involved the entire financial world. They have also aimed to provide for his retirement in any event. Furthermore, the speculative situation is such that in order to preserve their own position in the market the other interests would be forced to assume the burden laid down by Harriman. If they were to let this market escape from their iron grip for even one day it might seriously jeopardize the successful culmination of their greater efforts.

$ $ $

The Harriman program for a transcontinental system has not been altered in the slightest detail and he has trusted his interests in such a way that even if he should die the arrangements will be completed the same as if he were alive. Whether Harriman lives or dies is not worth $10 a share to Union Pacific stockholders, for Harriman's work is done. The great ambition of his life has been accomplished in all but final ratification, and that ratification has been provided for.

$ $ $

Further evidence of the activity of the Morgan interests on the bull side was disclosed when Louisville & Nashville and Atlantic Coast Line became almost as conspicuously strong as United States Steel in response to a revival of the rumor that the holders of these stocks would receive valuable rights before very long.

$ $ $

The attack on Consolidated Gas indirectly affects People's Gas, though there is nothing in common between the two corporations. Some large stockholders in the New York company are also in the Chicago concern. But physically the two are wide apart.

There has never been any question about the People's Company being able to maintain the 7 per cent. dividend rate, unexpectedly declared some time ago; indeed, there has been a suspicion that the company for years has been over modest in the matter of showing its full assets and earning capacity. The management, speaking physically, is the best. The only doubt in the minds of old line investors has been in regard to the fiscal policy as represented by the Brady people.

$ $ $

So far as the company's affairs may be credited with causing the recent market strength of St. Paul common stock, probably some weight must be assigned to the provision of adequate working capital through the recent $25,000,000 bond sale. Also, with the resumption of normal activity in general business and the assurance of good crops in the Northwest, optimism regarding the success of the Pacific Coast extension has displaced doubt. But the salient feature of the road's condition at the moment is the constant trend of its gross earnings upward.

Gross earnings during June approximated $5,000,000, increase $600,000, bringing the total for the late fiscal year close to $60,000,000, increase $3,000,000, or about eight per cent. The showing is better than the record of any of the other roads operating in generally similar territory. It is only $650,000 below the St. Paul's own high mark established in 1907, the banner railroad year.

$ $ $

Fully 90 per cent. of the looms of the American Woolen Company are now busy, and it is estimated by officials of the corporation, the opinion being based upon the sales thus far, that 1909 will show a gross income for the company aggregating $65,000,000.

This seems quite possible in view of the fact that woolens have again come into public favor, as shown by the large orders from all parts of the country, and the increase in prices.

When the market for raw materials, in sympathy with financial conditions, was from 10 to 20 per cent. lower than it is now, the company bought about 20,000,000 pounds of wool, which, if sold even in the raw state at present, would net a substanial profit. Made up into cloth, the gain will be correspondingly greater.

If the sales of 1909 total $65,000,000 they will be nearly $15,000,000 greater than 1908, heretofore the record year of the concern.

About the only feature of interest in the local copper market during the last few days has been the good volume of inquiry from consumers, the demand being principally for electrolytic for early delivery. Outside of the metal already contracted for there has not been much of a movement into consumption during the present month and a resumption of buying for Fall requirements is expected in late August or early September.

Inquiry among leading consumers fails to reveal the presence of more than nominal stocks. Manufacturers have bought ahead slightly more than for some time, but only for such requirements actually foreseen. The last upward movement of the metal failed to stampede the consumers into the market nor is there any indication that the hand-to-mouth policy which has prevailed for the better part of the last two years will be diverged from in the near future.

MARKET WEAK, THEN RALLIES

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Following a weak market in London, stocks opened low in Wall street to-day, with material losses in all active stocks. Conflicting reports of Harriman's health caused the excitement, and the Harriman stocks were particularly weak. It developed, however, that a raid was in progress by big floor traders and sensational operators.

Within a few minutes after the opening brokers discovered that the buying was of the best character that has appeared in the market for many weeks, nearly all the sales being taken by Morgan and Harriman brokers. The result was a sudden check in the decline, and a quick rally averaging almost a point throughout the list.

The intimation regarding Harriman that comes from most trustworthy sources is that he is not coming home for his health, but in order to arrange final details for taking over formal control of the New York Central.

A very healthful influence in the market was an attack made on a Boston operator who is almost invariably wrong.

Crop reports were better than those of yesterday, Illinois reporting wheat and corn in the best condition ever known in that State with the largest acreage on record. Semi-official announcement was made that Rock Island would certainly pay a dividend this year.

On the New York Curb Market Kerr Lake continued the leader, with a new high record. La Rose, Nipissing, Nevada Consolidated and other important issues, were strong.

WORLD STOCK OF RADIUM FOUND

KENNETT, Cal., Aug. 19.—Dr. S. Wilkins, who arrived here to-day, says enough pitchblend has been discovered on the McCloud river, north of here to supply the world with radium for all time. Dr. Wilkins has in his possession fine specimens of the precious stuff, and so impressed some business men with his story that they have sent an expert to visit the newly discovered ledges.

DRY GOODS FIELD DAY.

The annual outing of the Houghton & Dutton Company will be held at the Riverside Recreation Grounds Saturday. A special train will leave the South Station at 1:40, returning at 10:30 p. m. There will be two interesting ball games, the regular team vs. L. P. Hollander & Co., and the Buyers vs. the Floor Managers. There will also be track, field and water sports for prizes and many exhibitions by experts, including the Berlo family, swimmers.

WEAKNESS IN MINING LIST

STATE STREET, Aug. 19.—The market leaders encouraged a further reaction this forenoon, and the local market presented a weak appearance. The traders gunned for sell stop orders, and were partially successful, although mining shares showed only fractional declines. The metal market in London was weak, and this facilitated the movement for lower prices.

The uncertainty of the New York market did not inspire buying orders, and arbitrage stocks were offered in this market. Amalgamated ran off to below 84 and Steel sagged to 76.

Mining shares were less active. Lake dropped a full point to 36½ and U. S. Smelting lost fractionally to 53¾. North Butte was quiet at 57@56½ and Copper Range yielded to 81⅛. Kerr Lake, a Cobalt mine, was an exception, advancing to 9⅛ on fairly large transactions.

Curb trade was broad and active, but prices were generally shaded. Rhode Island Coal was again the feature at 10⅛ @10¼. Champion Copper was quiet at 26 cents.

COURT ACTS IN STRIKE MATTER

PITTSBURG, Aug. 19.—Judge James S. MacFarland, will hear arguments to-morrow as to why the court should not appoint arbitrators to settle the differences between the Pressed Steel Car Company and its striking workmen. The company's attorneys have filed thirteen reasons why arbitrators should not be appointed, the burden of their reply being that the Pennsylvania law which provides for such action is unconstitutional. The usual clash between strike-breakers and strikers occurred at intervals during the night, one striker being shot and several arrests being made.

WASHINGTON STATE FOR THE INCOME TAX

OLYMPIA, Wash., Aug. 19.—The lower house of the Washington State Legislature has voted to ratify the constitutional amendment permitting an income tax.

Comparison of Market Values of
Certain Low Grade Copper Properties
with
Present Market Value of Rhode Island Coal Property

In the mining and smelting of low grade copper ores, yielding 1 3-4% to 2 1-2% copper, the net result would be 35 to 50 pounds copper per ton of ore mined. Assuming 50 pounds as an average return, if it should cost 9 cents per pound for all expenses in connection with mining and marketing the copper, the cost would be $4.50 per ton of copper ore sent to smelter—and if sold at 13 cents per pound, it would net the company 4 cents per pound, on 50 pounds copper—$2.00 per ton of ore. If the price of copper was 15 cents per pound, the copper company would net $3.00 per ton on its ore mined.

Turn now to Rhode Island Coal Company. The seams of coal are of more than the average width and, what is peculiar in seams of anthracite coal, are entirely free from slate or rock. It is estimated by experienced miners that this coal can be mined at a cost of not exceeding $1.25, and 75 cents additional per ton will cover all surface expenses, cost of selling, etc., etc., or a total of $2.00 per ton loaded on cars. The cost of transportation to Fall River, Providence, Taunton and places within this zone is 50 cents per ton of 2240 pounds, enabling the company to place its product in these places at a cost of $2.50 per ton of 2240 pounds. Admitting that the coal is of a satisfactory quality, it will bring in the market certainly $4.50 per ton, which would be the same net profit per ton of coal as in a ton of 2 1-½% copper ore, with copper at 13 cents per pound. But the coal would probably bring in these places not less than $5.50 per gross ton, a net profit of $3.00 per ton, equalling the profit on 2 1-2% copper ore, with copper selling at 15 cents per pound.

The following copper figures are taken from the columns of the Boston News Bureau of August 17th, 1909:

Company.	Market Value.	Estimated tons of ore.	Given an equal number of tons of coal in the R. I. Coal Co.'s mines, Rhode Island Coal Stock would sell for—
Gila	$5,747,000	2,000,000	$5,747,000	or	$14.36 per share
Inspiration	7,500,000	3,000,000	7,500,000	or	18.75 per share
Cumberland-Ely	9,587,000	5,000,000	9,587,000	or	23.96 per share
Giroux	13,600,000	8,000,000	13,600,000	or	34.00 per share
Chino	5,687,000	9,000,000	5,687,000	or	14.21 per share
Miami	9,885,000	14,000,000	9,885,000	or	24.71 per share
	$52,004,000	41,000,000	$52,004,000	or	$130.00 per share

On the property of the Rhode Island Company, two seams of coal have been worked in a small way, one of the seams having been followed to a depth of 1500 feet. It is believed that these two seams extend substantially over all the 4000 acres of the company's property, in which case the quantity of coal in these two seams alone is more than double the estimated ore of all the above named copper properties.

In addition, another seam has recently been found, about three-fourths of a mile from the present working, of a thickness of sixteen feet, as reported by the foreman in charge of one of the diamond drills.

Professor Shaler says of the coal in the Narragansett basin, of which this is believed to be the centre:

"Although there is no basis of reckoning the quantity with any degree of accuracy, there can be little doubt that it is to be estimated by the hundred million tons."

Three diamond drills are now at work on the property of the company. In the course of a few months it will be possible to estimate the quantity with an absolute "degree of accuracy."

Quoting further from the Boston News Bureau of August 17th:

"In regard to the companies which are not yet producing, three of them, the Ray Consolidated, Miami and Ohio, are building concentrating mills which it is estimated will be producing copper at the rate of 40,000,000, 28,000,000 and 14,000,000 pounds per year respectively, beginning operations within the next 10 months. It is regarded as likely that within the next year the rest of these companies will be erecting reduction plants, as developments at the different properties fully warrant such an action."

The Rhode Island Coal Company confidently expect to be mining and shipping coal by the first of January, 1910, at the rate of 100 tons per day; in February, 200 tons per day; and so on, increasing in about this proportion steadily, month to month, for the next two or three years.

RIVAL PACERS ARE TO MEET AT READING

Directumwood of the Dorchester and Reliance of the Lynn Driving Club will come together next Saturday in the intercity meeting at the Reading-Wakefield track, and from the amount of talk made by the admirers of each it is safe to believe there will be plenty doing in the nature of side bets as to which pacer is the faster. In the same event is entered Pat L., from Fellsway Club and Marchwood, representing the Quinnapowitts.

While this race carries the most interest, yet in the other eleven listed must result many a hot set-to before the winners can be decided. In Class D, trot, will meet Hawkins, Tower Boy, Nancy Nelson and Fred N. Class C will see Cascade, Edith R., Lady Laurin and Belle Sherwood take the word. Crown Prince, Harry Bingen, Croesus and Maxine are down to start in Class F. There surely must be excitement when Class H is away on the journey around the track, as the entries are Louise G., Gagnaunt, Minola and Chesterhallis.

The AMERICAN is the Great Home Paper.

COLLINS TO RACE AGAINST 2 RIDERS

Just how good Elmer Collins, the Lynn motor pace rider is will surely come to light next Saturday night when he races at the Revere track against Eddie Root, the blonde-haired boy, and veteran Frank Galvin in a twenty-five-mile event. He concedes Root two laps and Galvin four laps.

Collins was to have met Champion Hugh MacLean, but they could not agree on terms, and the event had to be passed up for the time being.

NO CAPTAIN FOR TIGERS HEREAFTER

DETROIT, Aug. 19.—The Tigers will no longer play under a captain. That position has been abolished by Manager Jennings.

Herman Schaefer was the 1909 captain of the Tigers. Last week he was traded to Washington, and Jennings was to have appointed a man in Schaefer's place Monday.

But there was no appointment made. "Hughey" could not have appointed a man if he wanted to, and he had no desire in the world to name one. He wants to have the Tigers "captainless" hereafter.

Only one of the last six captains the Detroit team has had is still playing regularly in the major leagues, and that one is Schaefer.

There was Barrows and there was Smith and Gleason, Lowe and Coughlin. They all served in the capacity of captain. But hardly had they been appointed than their work fell below the major league standard and they were forced to retire.

The best season of Schaefer's career was that of 1908. In hitting and fielding and inside base he accomplished more than he ever did before, and when "Bill" Coughlin returned to the minors at the close of last season Schaefer stood out before all others because of the work he had done in 1908.

Schaefer got a bad start this year, and he never bettered himself. He fielded without much evidence of energy, and his hitting was in no wek worthy of serious consideration. He continued in this slump till Jennings finally benched him, and from the bench Schaefer went to Washington.

The same kind of luck has fallen to the lot of every Tiger who tried to assume the responsibilities of captain, and to-day there is not a man who does not believe that presiding over the job is a hoodoo, from which no one attempting to fill the position can escape. There is not a Tiger who would take the captaincy, and Jennings has reached the conclusion that the only way to kill the hoodoo is to abolish the job, and he believes that since the captaincy is abolished the Detroit team will forge to the front, not to be taken out of first place again this season.

BAY STATE RIFLE TEAM NEAR RECORD.

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 19.—Eight riflemen from Massachusetts defeated thirty-seven teams and broke the record in the Herrick match, shot under the auspices of the Ohio State Rifle Association, and came within twelve points of duplicating the world's record at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, which the American team set in the 1907 Palmer match at Ottawa. The Bay State cracks knocked out an even 1,700 in as bitterly a contested battle as the Camp Perry ranges have ever seen. Stubbornly did the Ohioans, winners in 1907 of the $3,500 trophy, fight minute by minute from 7 o'clock this morning until 5:30, but they quit at 1,696 and took the $100 second prize.

HARD HITTERS TO BOX.

One of the best boxing cards that has been staged in New Hampshire is billed for August 27, when Terry Martin, the hard-hitting Quaker, meets Bartley Connolly of Portland, Me., in a ten-round bout at Manchester. Both are terrific hitting middleweights.

GOLF GOSSIP NEWS OF THE LINKS

To-day the second of the three-day tournaments at the Essex County Club starts with one of the largest entries ever realized. A field representative of clubs located in New York, Philadelphia, Massachusetts and other States is entered, and many cracks are in the lists. J. H. Childs, who won the Manchester Cup in July, and G. McC. Sargent will be the best for the home club, while Lockwood, Anderson, Herreshoff, White, Whittemore, Wilder and many other high-class players will go out for the first sixteen and the Essex Cup. It is very probable that the score of 75 which took the low qualifying score in the last month's meeting will be lowered by a stroke or so in to-day's play.

Tom McNamara, the professional at the Wollaston Golf Club, is still keeping up his splendid game of golf. Recently he succeeded in lowering the professional record for the course, and played a beautiful 65. He went out in 35, returning in 30, with no sixes on his card and only two fives.

Alex Smith, the Wykagyl Golf Club's professional, twice broke the record for his home course a short time ago. He played in a four-ball match and accomplished the first round in 74, two strokes under the record. However, not quite contented with this score, he played a beautiful 70 on the next round.

The Trojan A. C. would like a game for Saturday with some fast sixteen-seventeen-year-old teams and also Labor Day. Edward H. Bogan, 5 King street, Roxbury.

The Sacred Hearts of Cambridge would like to hear from some fast semi-professional team for Saturday away from home. C. J. Lane, 141 Essex street, Boston.

The Savoy A. C. of Lynn would like to arrange a game with some eighteen-nineteen-year-old teams for Saturday at or away from home. W. J. Connolly, 14 Church street, Lynn.

The Sacred Heart, Jrs., of Cambridge would like to arrange a game for Saturday with some fourteen-fifteen-year-old team. Will give half fares and good treatment. Edward Kelliher, 20 Hampshire street.

The Beacon Club of Everett are without a game for Saturday, August 21, owing to a mixup in their schedule, and wish to hear from strongest amateur teams at once; home grounds. Telephone Everett 21270. Jerry Bean, 39 Harley avenue, Everett, between 7 and 9 p. m.

The strong Bay View of South Boston are without a game for next Saturday, August 21, and would like to hear from some fast semi-professional team, giving reasonable guarantee. The Auburns of Roslindale and the Riversides of Cambridge preferred. J. J. Logan, 35 Swallow street, South Boston.

CHAMPION ATHLETES MEET AT FIELD DAY

The great day in the history of SS. Peter and Paul's parish will be the field day and parish reunion at Caledonia Grove, West Roxbury, next Saturday, and the list of games is as follows: One hundred-yard dash, one-quarter mile run, one-half mile run, mile run, two-mile run, broad jump, shot-put, obstacle race, high jump. The grand finale will be a tug-of-war between the A. O. H. and the M. C. O. F.

The all-round champion athlete of the world, Martin J. Sheridan, will take part in the meet, as will Ben Sherman, winner last year of the New England championship. The entry list, which promises to be the largest held in this vicinity, includes Llewellyn of Cambridge, Francis O'Hara, the schoolboy sprinter; Freddie Burns, the holder of the Exeter record; Jack Connolly, Ed. Farrell, the New England broad jumper; Ike Sheehan, the one-half miler; W. H. McVicker and Joe Ballard, mile runners, and fifty other noted athletes of New England. A champion baseball game between the Notre Dames and the Andrew square A. C. promises to be an exciting feature.

MURPHY WILL BET SOME HOUSES HE CAN BEAT BAT

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Mr. T. Murphy, the Flatbush real estate dealer, is after the scalp of B. Nelson, author-actor, runner and peddler of the moonshine stuff.

"I never came up here before to tell you that I could beat a fellow, did I? Well, I can beat Nelson for any distance he ames, and I'd almost make it winner take all. Yes, ten rounds or forty-five rounds. I know I can beat him. The day I boxed him at American League Park, I discovered that he was my dish. He says I tried to double-cross him and send him sprawling, but that's the bunk. If he wants me to really show him how I can fight, why I'm there like a duck and I'll bet him a few houses on the side, too. I meet Ad Wolgast at Pittsburg on September 1st, and after that if Nelson wants any just tell him to wise me up."

* * *

Willie Lewis, it seems, doesn't want to get mussy with Sailor Burke again. His manager laughed at Jimmy Johnson when he was offered the go. He said we might box Burke if Lewis beats Papke, but I won't say for sure. We beat Burke once, that's enough. One Burke admirer said last night that Lewis was like a fellow who had dropped off Brooklyn Bridge by mistake, and, fining himself still alive, said: "Never again, I'll pass up the bridges for mine."

Burke just happened in this minute and said that he would bet Lewis $1,500 if he wanted it. They say you can beat the 'phone slots now with those Lincoln pennies. Oh, you Sailor!

* * *

James Barry, the heavyweight person who used to face Sam Langford so often, is a real bear when he gets mussy. He almost killed Phil Brock and the latter's manager, Tom McGinty, in Los Angeles the other day. Jim was mopping the floor up and discovered after a cleaning that some mean person had expectorated upon the lily white boards. He accused Brock, and they got in a mix. McGinty hung a few on Jim when the latter picked up a mop handle, and, using the same swing that Samson did when he slew the Philistines, dropped both. McGinty was unconscious for three hours, but Brock escaped with a cut on his noodle, which required four stitches.

Johnny Frayne has the chance of his life Friday night in Frisco when he meets Dick Hyland for a twenty-round spin. Heiny Rafael, who manages Johnny, writes saying that he has signed up with Coffroth for a forty-five-round go with Nelson in case he wins. Heiny says that it sounds almost too good to be true and is afraid that he will wake up before the dope wears off.

* * *

Sounds almost too good to be true that Ketchel and Britt are on their way here to fight Langford. Months ago every one was saying that Langford could take the cowboy and spank him with one hand. Now, if you ask who is going to win the majority say Ketchel. Even with his miserable showing against Papke staring us in the face, it looks as though he will rule favorite over Sam, but at that the betting will be stubborn ad copious.

IN READVILLE FUTURITY RACE

Will there be any of the Readville trained three-year-olds classy enough to take a winning part in the season's futurity stakes? It does now appear doubtful. There are several in training, but to date none of startling promise.

In years back it was er this late in the season when yougsters of the age were showing quality to cause considerable talk. There was Cochato, which in August was up to 2:12 in his work, as was true of Blue Hill, Aquin and a couple of others. This account will tell what has been accomplished to date this year.

Jack Morgan has worked D. W. Caton's Belvista in 2:15¼; James Carpenter has gone in 2:15½ with Echo Todd, J. M. Johnson's futurity candidate, but he has been slightly lame for some time; Henry Titer has worked Czarine Bingen in 2:16¼ and Forbes in 2:18. These seem to be the likeliest for the futurities. Certainly not an alarming showing for the rich classics to come.

In the two-year-old division of the futurity events there is a better representative, it would appear, as Titer has in the Leonard colt one of considerable promise. He has troted several miles in 2:21¼, while halves in 1:06 are within his limit. He acts like he is level-headed, and ought to be capable of reling off a mile between 2:15 and 2:16 by the time the Grand Circuit reaches Readville.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

OUR JOE WOOD SEEMS TO HAVE made a hit with the New York sport writers by the way he pitched in that first game of the double-header yesterday. It's hard to get a New York sport writer to see anything good about a player who does not belong in the big town, but they had to fall for Boston's twenty-year-old twirler. Bill Phelon, who has been writing baseball since the ducking stone was in vogue in New Amsterdam, spreads the smooth over for Joe thusly in his paper this morning:

> The first game proved a golden graft for Joe Wood, the cool, thoroughly clever fellow whom Boston bought for $6,000 from Kansas City. The Giants paid $11,000 for Marquard, but it is hard to see where any mathematician can figure Wood as being only six-elevenths as valuable as Marquard. On general form, Wood looks to be worth about two and nine-fourth times as classy as McGraw's expensive purchase. Yesterday Wood was the real works. He held the Highlanders with most beautiful skill, keeping them from even annoying him most of the afternoon, and shut them out as if they were Chinese children. Incidentally, Mr. Wood's whole family came all the way from Kansas City to see him pitch, and are now convinced that dear Joe is quite—a wonder.

DANIEL COUGHLIN OF No. 94 KINNARD street, Cambridge, manager of the Putnam A. A., writes me a long and interesting letter, which begins: "I suppose that by this time you are tired of having every eighteen-year-old team in the State dispute the title of the Eastern A. A. as champion" You bet I am, Dan. I'm so dog goned tired of these championship claims that I'm beginning to shy off every time I see the copy boy coming my direction with a bunch of mail. By actual count there are seventeen claimants for championship titles at ages ranging from fifteen to eighteen years, and I've read so many of their letters that I'm not surprised that I'm getting dippy in the bean. Of course, Dan, I'm going to say right here that you challenge the Easterns or any other team for the title. I hope every darned one of you title claimants win every game you play, but I'm for an X-ray machine to look through the letters before I open them. This goes.

IT IS TO BE HOPED THAT THE following letters on the life and works of Jack Reed, or Jack Reid, will be sufficient to allay the fears of an anxious public that there never was a man with this monacher or that he never played on Holy Cross' football, beseball, basketball or some other kind of a team. I assure you this will be about all of Jack Reed, or Jack Reid:

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—I saw 'Admirer's' letter in your column Saturday, about Jack Reid playing with Carigan on Holy Cross team. Tel him, for me, that he has the right idea, but he is in wrong.

Jack Reid played basketball and football for the Purple, but never played baseball. He is now playing professional football in New York State. There was a Reidy playing ball with Holy Cross at that time, however.

I haven't missed five games on the Holy Cross grounds in ten years, so know what I am talking about. That is a great column you have, old man; keep it up. G. H. M.,

Worcester, Aug. 16.

* * *

Straight Dope, Boston American:

There has been so much questioning about Jack Reed of Holy Cross that I hope this letter will not be entirely unwelcome. Jack Reed or as we used to call him "Bunco," left Holy Cross in the Spring of 1905. He played half back with Bill Carrigan in the Fall of 1904, and was on the football team the three years previous. He also played basketball and was a guard of more than ordinary ability. I doubt very much his baseball worth—that is compared with the Holy Cross standard—and I know that during his last two years he was not on the team. His greatest value was in place kicking and in this he approached perfection. His home is in Middletown, Ct., but he is football coach at Niagara and physical instructor in some New York town. The player who beat out Galvin of Quincy for right field was Maurice Reidy of Winsted, Ct. Reidy left Holy Cross in his sophomore year and went to Columbia. Bill Carrigan knows both Reed and Reidy.

I know these facts because I was at Holy Cross and I wished to inform you correctly.

Very truly yours, J. F. M.

P. S.—Reed never was an All-American sub., but according to Camp, Tom Stankard—a Holy Cross man from Waltham—was sub. full back in 1903.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Will you please put in the following in your column? A good catcher would like to play with some semi-professional team for Saturday and the rest of the season. Can be secured by addressing L. Nebell, 2 Waterford street, suite 2, Boston, Mass. Thanking you in advance I remain, respectfully yours,

L. NEBELL.

A PITTSBURG SPORTING SCRIBE springs the following anent the stitch in the side of the great Wagner, which threatened for a time to end his baseball career:

"Ach, lieber Gott,"
Says Hans: "'Tis not
One stitch in time
Dot safes der nine;
It seems to me,"
Says Hans, says he,
"Dis stitch of mine
It spoils der nine."

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—To settle a hot argument (which may end in a fight), will you kindly dope it out for me how Joe Wood gets credit for winning the game against "Cy" Young on August 12. It might be well to print your dope, as there are many fans who would like this question answered. I dope it out that, as the score was 3 to 2 in Cleveland's favor, that Wood was considered entirely out of the game after Wolter had batted for him. They (Boston) then scored three runs after Wolter had been put out. Thanking you in advance, I am, yours truly, CYRUS HOTCHKISS.

Dorchester, Mass., Aug. 16, 1909.

Wood was the pitcher until the end of the fourth inning when Hall went to the slab, in spite of the fact that Wolter batted for him. The score stood 5 to 3 in favor of the Red Sox when Hall relieved Wood in the pitcher's box, so Wood gets credit for winning the game.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

The St. Paul's of Cambridge, who met and defeated the Roger Wolcott A. A., are willing to give that team a chance to redeem themselves, and if they do not care to accept the same offer is open to the Roxbury Notre Dames, who have been doing some clever dodging.

I have next Saturday, August 21, open at home and will gladly give this date to some fast team (uniformed) around Boston. Hoping this will help clear the so-called amateur championship, I am, SID MURPHY.

23 Magee street.

FAIRPLAY, NO. 135 NORTH DIGHTON street, Boston.—In the event of two horses running a dead heat the owners have the privilege of running it over or dividing first and second money, and in several years' experience at race tracks I never saw a dead heat run off. The owners are satisfied to divide. In case, however, it should be run off, the horse runing second would get second money. The same applies to trotting races, but as these are always run in heats the chance of dead heats is remote.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Kindly inform me who is known as the Butcher Boy? George Borthner or John Piening, and oblige. JOHN KIRBY.

U. S. S. Maine.

John Piening has frequently been cal the "Butcher Boy," and I don't blame any one. I have called him worse than that myself when he lost a match I was piking a little bet on. Call him whatever you want to. He w 't mind it if he doesn't hear you.

THERE IS SOME TALK OF THE adoption of a rule which will put an end to teh walking of a difficult batter by a pitcher in order to get at a weak one. The rule suggested is that whenever a batter is walked, every man on bases shall advance one base. For instance, if a runner is on second, from where he could score on a single, and a batter is walked, the runner on second advances to third. This might do the business and break up a bad practice. The fans count on every man having an opportunity to hit the ball. The fans are the ones who keep the game alive.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

With three men on bases and two out the batter hits to short. The shortstop throws to second, but before the putout the man scores from third base. Is it immaterial where the putout is made or does the throw have to be to first in order not to have the score count?

F. E. W.

No run counts when the side is retired on a force out at any base, so the run could not count in the play described.

AUTOISTS MAY ESCAPE FINES REST OF YEAR

By J. C. KERRISON.

The decision of Judge Cutler regarding the new automobile law is creating no end of discussion. If this decision is carried out by the justices of other courts, then but few convictions for automobile violations will be recorded prior to the first of the new year. Judge Cutler, on the ground that there was no penalty provided for violations of the law, discharged a defendant who had pleaded guilty to driving a motor cycle without a lighted lantern.

The prosecution contended that if it was decided that there were no penalties provided for violations of the automobile laws autoists could run machines without licenses, without regard to speed limitations and even when intoxicated, and the authorities would be powerless. He then called Judge Cutler's attention to that provision of the statutes which provides that "if no punishment is provided for by the statute, the court shall impose such sentence as is in accordance with the nature of the crime as conforms to the common usage in practice in this Commonwealth."

Judge Cutler replied that the statute quoted was inoperative in the case under consideration, inasmuch as the automobile law does prescribe penalties. These penalties, however, are not to be in effect until January 1.

This question has been raised on somewhat similar cases in other courts, but this is the first instance where the justice has taken the above position. With this decision in mind, there is no question of the penalty, for really there is nothing in the motor law at the present time which calls for the imposition of a penalty. In fact, in the sections of the law which became operative on July 1 last no penalties are named, these sections providing what and what shall not be done in different conditions.

The contentions of the police authorities, however, is that where a man is convicted under the new law the old penalty shall be invoked, and this contention has up to date in the main been carried out by the police courts.

Entries for the National Stock Chassis Competition at Lowell on September 6, 7 and 8 are flying in thick and fast. Nineteen additional entries were made on Saturday last, which augments the already large list considerably, and a score or more are expected within the next few days. These made last Saturday include a string of ten Buicks, to be driven in the various events by Louis Chevrolet, Strang, Burman, Ryall, DeWitt and Arthur Chevrolet; three Maxwells, one Moon, to be driven by Harold Brinker, the western crack; one Allen-Kingston, a Columbia, an Isotta, an eighteen h. p. Mercedes, a Bergdoll and a second Apperson. Paul Lacroix has decided to swell the list of foreigners by putting a second Renault among the contenders, with Charles Basle as the pilot.

STONE DRAWS WITH ATTELL

SARATOGA, Aug. 19.—The best Abe Attell could do in his ten round bout with Harry Stone was to get a draw before a 2,000 house.

For eight rounds the milling was slow, but in the ninth Stone went after Attell, and in that round and in the tenth had the better of the furious pace by a good margin. Stone was palpably afraid of Attell in the first eight rounds, and Abe had a lead in four of the eight because of Stone's habit of covering up. The other four rounds of the eight were even.

But in the ninth and tenth Stone evened matters by carrying the fight to the featherweight champion from bell to bell. Many thought that had Stone been able to overcome his timidity earlier in the bout he might possibly have earned a decision. He was aggressive enough when he once got started, but it was too late to swing the tide of battle in his favor.

The tenth was a repetition of the ninth. Stone again forced matters and opened Attell's left eye again. It was a fast and furious milling and had Stone fought in the same manner during the earlier rounds he might have beaten the champion.

HAMBURG BELLE AND MARGARET O. IN RACE

Secretary Wilson has kites to the windward for a sensational amateur driving contest at Lexington during the October meeting. He hopes to persuade John E. Madden to take a seat in a light wagon behind Hamburg Belle (2:02¾) and drive her against Margaret O. (2:05¼). W. E. D. Stokes, the owner of Margaret O., mildly protests that this mare would be outclassed with an expert like Mr. Madden behind the flying daughter of Axworthy, and to silence this objection it is suggested that an effort be made to obtain the consent of David Bonner to drive Margaret O.

SEMI-PRO. GAME WANTED.

Owing to cancellation the Gate of Heaven Holy Name Club is without a game for Saturday, August 21, and desires to play some fast team at home. Telephone 21044, South Boston, between 8 and 9 p. m. J. F. McCluskey.

Notes of the Red Sox Game

Wilson's error on a thrown ball to second to catch Carrigan napping helped the Red Sox a great deal as it moved Carrigan to third, Wood from first to second. Niles then scored both with a nice single.

Lord made a good bunt in the fifth session just inside third base foul line and as the going was heavy he would have been caught but made a fine slide to first and beat Austin's throw.

Carrigan didn't impress the New York fans very well when it came to sprinting as he was nearly thrown after Austin had fumbled. Bill made up for this by getting Austin's foul right at the stand after a hard run. They cheered him mightily for his swell plays.

Wood was robbed of a hit in the seventh round by Austin who made a dandy stop at third base.

Doc Gessler is now an acrobat. He did a most graceful handspring after nearly beating a hit in the fourth inning of the first game. He did not intend to do it though as he fell after getting to the bag.

Engle pulled off one of the best plays of the afternoon when he pulled down Lord's wallop that looked like a double.

Kuhr made a swell catch of Speaker's long foul in the fourth session of the second game.

Gee, how the New York bugs do yell when the home team seemed to have a chance to win. They were as quiet as a funeral procession all during the first game and then in the second they chattered all the time as their team was ahead most of the way.

Wood allowed but two hits for eight innings and in the ninth Keeler beat a scratchy hit in back of the pitcher's box, making three bingles during the first game.

Gee, the way the Red Sox fell on poor old Jack Chesbro in the eight round of his game. Jack issued a pass to start and then after Gessler had retired, Wagner and Stahl hit for triples and McConnell poked out a double. An infield out then scored another run, making four for that inning.

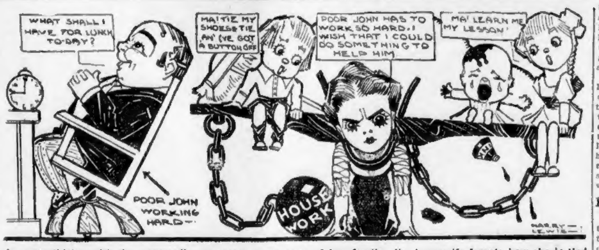
DOES THE AVERAGE WIFE EARN HER LIVING?

The Story of the Duties of the Average Housewife Told in Diary Form, Showing the Ordinary Work During One Day

By DOROTHY DIX



WHAT SHALL I HAVE FOR LUNCH TO-DAY?
MA! TIE MY SHOES & TIE AN' I'VE GOT A BUTTON OFF
POOR JOHN HAS TO WORK SO HARD. I WISH THAT I COULD DO SOMETHING TO HELP HIM
MA! LEARN ME MY LESSON!
POOR JOHN WORKING HARD—
HOUSE WORK
HARRY LEWIS

In sympathizing with the supposedly overworked members of her family, the housewife forgets how she is tied to her labors

WHEN Mr. Jones hears of a poor, lone, lorn woman having to wrestle with the bread and butter problem on her own account he puffs out his chest with pride and virtue and says, "Thank God, I support my wife."

Mrs. Jones echoes this sentiment, and feels that she ought to be humbly grateful because she doesn't have to earn her own living, as so many women do, though there are times when she wishes that she could "do something" that would bring in money and relieve her husband of part of the burden of having to take care of her.

Mrs. Jones is just the average, fairly well-to-do woman of what would be the middle class if we admitted to having any middle class in America. She is married—and glad of it—to a good man, who is sober and industrious, and brings her home most of his salary. She has two children that go to school and a baby that is at the age when it is ubiquitous and can get into anything from the top pantry shelf to under the bureau. Mrs. Jones does her own housework and sewing, and recently she has diverted herself by keeping a diary, the first few instalments of which are here given as throwing a searchlight on the question of whether a wife and mother earns her board and keep or not.

The diary reads as follows:

Monday, 6 A. M.—Got up at 5 o'clock. Opened the windows so as to let the rooms air. Heated baby's milk and gave her her bottle. Dressed myself. Lit the fire in the gas stove and while the water was heating cleaned up the sitting room. Wish a law could be passed suppressing the size of the Sunday newspapers. Seemed to me as if I picked up a ton of papers where John and the children had scattered them all over the floor.

The Morning Speeds Away

Wonder why a man can't smoke without getting ashes all over the place? There wasn't a spot in the whole room that wasn't littered with burnt matches and cigar stumps, to say nothing of dolls and tops and trumpery that the children had brought in, but fortunately I'm a quick worker and I managed to have everything neat and fresh by the time baby got through with her bottle and was ready for me.

9 A. M.—This is the first time, dear journal, since early in the morning that I have had time to write a line in you. Somehow the morning has just sped away, and yet I have done nothing. Let me see if I can recall what I have done since I made my last entry. Oh, yes. First, after I got through cleaning up the sitting room, for a family must have some decent place to go when they are dressed of a morning, I ran back and tidied up baby so that she would do until after breakfast. Then I went into the kitchen and started the coffee and the cereals, then I went back and waked up the children and got them to dressing.

By that time the dumbwaiter bell rang for the ice and I took that in, and while I was doing that Mary and Tommy got in a fight over which had the first right to the bath tub, and I had to rush back and arbitrate between them. Then the milkman rang and I had to sprint back to the dumbwaiter again. While I was in the kitchen I put on the balance of the breakfast, and then I had to go and comb Mary's hair and tie her ribbons and Tommy's necktie.

Then I set the dining room table and while I was doing it I heard a scream from baby, who had crept into the sitting room and pulled a bottle of ink off of a table on her head. You never saw such a sight, and I just had to fly around mopping the ink up off the rug before it soaked in. Then I grabbed baby up and took her off yelling and kicking to change her clothes.

It was half-past seven by this time, and I waked John up after I'd laid out his clean shirt and put the buttons in it and turned on his bath. Poor fellow, he has to work so hard supporting all of us that I always let him sleep until the last moment. Somehow I must have been careless about putting in the buttons, for while he was dressing one of them fell out and rolled under the chiffonier and I had to stop everything in the kitchen while I went in and found it for him.

Baby Helps Some

I had breakfast smoking hot on the table promptly by 8 o'clock; then I had to get John off to work and the children off to school, and John found out just as he was starting that he had a rip in his pocket that had to be sewed up, and Tommy had lost a button that I had to put on, and Mary remembered at the last moment that the teacher said that each of the scholars must know by heart a verse of poetry embodying some patriotic sentiment about our country, so I dropped everything and dug out some exquisite lines from Whittier which I taught he and—my—how [illegible] that child is abo memorizing anything!

I suppose it's wicked, but I certainly d breathe a sigh of relief when John an the children get off in the morning. Th I can settle down to my regular wor so as soon as they were gone I got up th clothes, mended the torn places and too out the fruit stains—and heaven know how my children get all the things o their clothes that they do—and all th time I was doing it there were continuou rings at the dumbwaiter from the butch er, and the baker, and the grocery ma and the vegetable man, wanting their o ders for the day.

Then I made up the beds, and swep the floors, and dusted things, and pu away all the Sunday clothes, and washe my dishes and cleaned up the dining roo and the kitchen, and gave the baby bath and dressed her all clean and swee and got her ready for the day. Poor lit tle lamb! It is a shame I have to neglec her so, but I really think I must be bad manager, it takes me so long to ge through with my work.

The other instalments of this Average Housewife's Diary, showing her labors through the hours, will appear in succeeding issues of this paper.

Percy the Press Agent

He Gives the Show Girl a Lesson on Conscience

By HANK.

"CONSCIENCE," said the Show Girl, "rules the world. Conscience means honesty, and without it life would be a dreary waste and all efforts to uplift humanity useless."

The Show Girl, let it be explained, was in that reflective mood resulting from over-indulgence in a midnight "dairy-lunch" feed, consisting of browned-hash with poached eggs, sliced tomatoes and coffee.

"You are so innocent," replied Percy brutally, "or so ignorant, my own sweet one, that you, with your auburn hair, remind me of a human poppy hidden in the mildew of mental blindness that clogs your perceptive powers with the blight of"——

"There, there," said the Show Girl, soothingly, "has its poor, little brain been touched by the sun? Put up your paranoia—you're going to have a brainstorm."

"Never mind about my brain," said Percy, testily; "I'm all right. But, gettin' down to real English, you ain't got no idea of conscience. Conscience is the bane of a press agent. With it he wouldn't hold his job five minutes, not saying, mind you, that I am absolutely conscienceless."

She Was Sore About His "Pipe"

"Oh! no, of course not," interrupted the Show Girl, "but meanin' to say that the amount of conscience that you possess wouldn't cover up a hole in a piece of Swiss cheese.

"I realize that, or you wouldn't have sprung that pipe in the paper about me having emotional hair. The idea of making me the laughing stock of the chorus, saying that my hair was so emotional that when I felt good it would become so springy that I couldn't keep hairpins in it, and when I felt blue it laid down flat like a pancake. Not much conscience in that."

"Well, I did it for your sweet sake and that picture of you in the dramatic column did look good, didn't it?"

"Ye-es," admitted the Show Girl, half heartedly, "but the story was such a pipe. My conscience wouldn't let me write anything like that."

"Your conscience wouldn't prevent you, my own," said Percy, "but your lack of ability to invent such stories."

"Oh, I dont know," sniffed the Show Girl, "you aint such a Napoleon of literature."

"Cut out the personalities," said Percy, "and get back to our argument. I tell you that nowadays conscience is considered more or less a butter-in.

What Conscience Would Do

"If conscience had its way we'd have no trusts to howl about and wouldn't need any police force. That would put hundreds of able-bodied citizens out of jobs, not mentioning the great army of press agents that it takes to keep show girls and others from pining away for want of notoriety."

"Stop your knocking," said the Show Girl. "Just because you never knew what conscience was you can't understand why anybody else should have it."

"Oh, but you are wrong, very wrong indeed," exclaimed Percy. "I had conscience so bad once that I even used to pay my tailor. But I got over that. I remember when I was a little boy in Ireland I was walking along a road with my father. It was about dusk, and way up in the woods off the side of the road I saw something white flapping about in the wind. I clung tight to my father's hand until he asked me what I was frightened about, and I told him. Without saying a word he turned back, and dragging me along, walked straight up to the tree where the white thing was flapping around, only to find out that it was some white paper that had been caught in the branches.

"'Now, my son,' he told me, 'let this be a lesson to you. Whenever you see something that frightens you and you don't know what it is, go right up to it and find out and you'll feel better for it.'

LET'S SEE! ARE YOU CHEERFUL OR GLUM?
HARRY LEWIS

"The emotional hair" made her the laughing stock of the chorus."

Following His Father's Advice.

"Well, it wasn't until many years after that, and poor old Dad had been dead a long time, that I had occasion to remember his words. I was tramping through the Rockies late one afternoon wishing for company. I hadn't seen a human being for forty-eight hours, and was as lonesome as a hermit flea. All of a sudden I happened to glance off one side of the trail and saw, or thought I saw, a man sitting by the side of a fallen tree asleep. His head was resting on his arms, which were placed on the tree, and I made up my mind to go over to him and wake him up. Then I took another look and decided that it wasn't a man at all, but a bear, and I ran as fast as I could for about a quarter of a mile.

"Then my father's words came back to me and my conscience kept tellin' me that I ought to go back and find out just what the thing was. Conscience won the mental bout and I beat it back to where the thing was still sitting. I walked bravely up to it, put my hand on its head and—it was a bear all right, and for the next two miles I broke all speed records running. No more conscience for mine except in very small doses."

"That scare did you good," said the Show Girl, "but that kind of conscience is different. It's true what you say about there being no press agents if conscience was given a chance, and for that matter I never could see that they was much use anyway."

"I won't argue it with you, my own," said Percy, "but just keep this in your noodle, that in this present century a great many of the rungs in a great man's ladder of fame have been put there by the conscienceless press agent. And that's no flight of fancy. Come on home."

Solution of Hot Weather Puzzle

MEMBERS of the Puzzle Class were able to prove from Squire Jones's description of his thermometer's fluctuations that on the day he kept tabs on the mercury it might have soared to 88¾ degrees. The Squire explained that in traveling 20 degrees the mercury gained only 2½ degrees and the picture showed it registered at 80. The Squire wanted us to tell the highest possible mark the mercury could have reached during those 20 degrees of movement. At the beginning of the day the mercury stood at 77½ degrees, then it might have jumped in the sketch, thus having gained 2½ degrees in 20 degrees of movement.

FOOLING THE FISH

IT has been found by the owner of a fishing boat at St. Abbs, Berwickshire, that a net dyed as nearly as possible the hue of the sea, instead of the traditional brown, results in a much better catch.

The discovery was put to the test on Wednesday night, when of a fleet of sixty-five fishing craft the boat with its nets dyed blue made by far the largest catch. The dye used is bluestone.—London Daily Mail.

FAMOUS LOVE LETTERS

— BY —
BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MY girls, you have all written and received love letters, and probably as you grow older you will keep one little, precious package of letters from the one man tucked away among your dearest possessions.

And from time to time you will take them out and read them over with tears or with tender memories as the case may be. Not that you will need to read them in order that you may remember them, for every word of those love messages will be stamped forever upon your hearts, but just that your eyes will ache to see the dear handwriting and your hands long to touch the paper that he wrote upon.

Many of the most beautiful love letters ever written have never found their way into print, but some of those written by famous people have been given to the world. And, as every woman's heart thrills at sight of a love letter, even though it may not be her own, I give you a few very famous ones. They are from a collection called "The Prettiest Love Letters," and are compiled by a French woman, Mme. de Pene.

The Danger of Love

Here is one written by Ninon de l'Enclos, one of the most beautiful women who ever lived, and who at ninety was as fresh and exquisite as a girl in her teens.

Her letter is a quaint little appreciation of man's love and vanity.

This is what she says:

To the Marquis de Sevigne:

"Shall I tell you what makes love dangerous? It is the sublime idea we have of it. But, to speak the truth, love is either a blind instinct or a bond of friendship, affectionate esteem. If, following in the footsteps of the heroes in fiction, you act like them, you will discover that this so-called heroism turns love into sorry and often fatal folly. It is sheer fanaticism, but if you are willing to see love as it really is, you will be happy.

"Honesty in love, Marquis! How can you think of such a thing! Alas, noble feelings are no longer fashionable. Love nowadays is but a game of mood and vanity, and it is often as necessary to conceal the greatness of one's love as, in other cases, to pretend to love more than one really does!

"The three words, 'I love you,' seem to be very precious in your eyes. What a strange man you are. Nothing is more revolting to a reasonable woman than that obstinacy of men in demanding her to tell them 'I love you,' in spite of her refusal to do so. Shall I tell you where your interest lies? Instead of persecuting a woman on that point, try to prevent her from realizing that she is beginning to love you. Make her love you before she notices it, before compelling her to confess it to herself. It is often because a woman loves a man that she does not tell him so. We always feel humiliated when we have to confess our love, even though we would like to do so!

"Besides, I warn you that your insistence is a craving of your vanity rather than a sign of love. Remember that nature has endowed us with intuition."

I hope my men friends will read that letter. There is much good advice in it for the young man who is going a-wooing.

Here is a letter from the greatest musician who ever lived, Richard Wagner, to the woman who was his love and inspiration, the woman who inspired his great love poem, "Tristan und Isolde."

Zurich, 1858.

"Surely you don't expect me not to reply to your wonderful and splendid letter. Or is it that I should give up the right to answer, owing to the supreme loftiness of your own words? But how would I answer you, except in a manner worthy of you?

What Wagner Wrote.

"Never, during my whole life, had I had feelings so intense and terrible as those I have had during the past few months. The world was empty before I knew you. * * * I shall not visit you often: I feel I must only see you when I shall be calm. In the past I have come to you with sorrows in my heart, and instead of being a source of joy to you I have caused you many pains. This must cease. If you do not see me for a long time, then—pray for me, secretly. For then you will know that I suffer! But if I come, then be sure that I shall bring to you the best that is in me, and give you a gift that I only could offer, I who have suffered so much—and voluntarily.

"You have been my all in all. To you I owe the only thing in this world which to me is still worthy of gratitude and interest. My very task as an artist had become painful. * * * Suddenly a woman appeared, hesitating and timid, who, with sublime courage, threw herself in the Ocean of Sorrow and told me, 'I love you.' You gave yourself to death in order to give me life. Since then, my task has been easy. All bitterness had vanished. Whatever happens, I know that the light of your love will never go out. Your love is my supreme treasure; without it my life would have no meaning.

"Thanks, my loving angel!

"I have felt intensely thes edays, how much I depend upon you. To you I owe the serenity of my soul. All that comes from you is a lesson. My one ambition is to be your equal, to raise myself to your level!"

Every word in it breathes sublime love and tenderness—and renunciation, for they could be friends only.

I love this letter from Napoleon to Josephine and think how she must have loved him as she read it; how proud she must have been to know that amidst all the worry of statecraft and thunder of war he could take time to write a letter like this:

"Marmizola, July 17.

"I am constantly thinking of you, of your tears, your sweetness, your charming jealousy, and your beauty, too, Josephine.

"When shall I, free from care and anxieties, be able to spend a few moments with you and tell you that I love you. I hope you will soon be able to join me here. I thought I loved you, but I love you more and more every day. It only shows how wrong La Bruyere was when he wrote that 'love comes suddenly.' Ah! I beg of you, let me know a few of your defects. * * * Be less beautiful, less graceful, less tender, and, above all, less kind. Don't be jealous, and never, never, allow yourself to weep. Your tears drive me mad. Try to realize that there cannot be in me a single thought that I would not submit to you.

"Take a rest. Recover your health and join me, so that, before dying, we may both be able to say, 'We were happy for so many days.'

"Your portrait which you gave me and the alluring hours I spent with you yesterday have bewitched me. Sweet and fearless, Josephine, what strange influence you have over me! When you are angry, depressed, or agitated my heart is broken, and there is no rest or peace for me. I shall see you in three hours' time. Meanwhile, mio dolce amor, I send you a million kisses."

No Gush in Them

That letter is not remarkable as a literary masterpiece; it is just a living, breathing message of love, vibrating with life and permeated with love, the sort of letter that a woman reads and re-reads and loves with every fibre of her being.

These letters all go to prove that a love letter may be exquisitely tender without being in the least degree foolish.

Remember that, dear girls, when you write your own love letters. Let them be tender and loving, but never silly or gushing.

These letters were written many years ago, but love is the same yesterday, to-day and forever; its fashions never change, it sprang into being perfect and glorious.

And the "voice that breathed o'er Eden that first primeval day" is still singing love's undying song.

The Bill Clerk Prescribes

He Tells What the Cashier Should Do for a Cold.

By KENNETT HARRIS

"I SEE you've caught a cold," remarked the bill clerk.

"You have truly remarkable powers of observation," returned the cashier, rather thickly. "It's something to be proud of, and I don't blame you for announcing it. Many people, seeing my inflamed eyes and swollen nose, would conclude that I had been grieving for the death of a near and dear relative. Even my copious use of a pocket handkerchief and my frequent sternutations wouldn't put them (to use the current phrase) Joseph."

"You ought to do something for it," the bill clerk suggested.

"Do you really think so?" asked the cashier. "Well, possibly I should. The great trouble is to know what to do. So very few people seem to know, and it hardly seems worth while consulting a doctor. Could you recommend a reliable remedy, Johnnie?"

"Sure," answered the bill clerk. "Just before you go to bed to-night drink a tumbler of hot lemonade and put on plenty of quilts and sweat it out. That's what they used to do with me when I was a kid. I'd wake up in the morning and I wouldn't have any more cold than a rabbit."

"What's your opinion of quinine?" asked the cashier. "I don't mean to toy with it, but a good man's size dose of ten of twelve grains."

"I guess that would be all right, too," allowed the bill clerk.

"Or a foot bath of hot mustard and hot water and the bed cover?" the cahsier continued. "Do you know anything about that?"

"I've heard it well spoken of," replied the bill clerk. "A fellow told me once that the only way to cure a cold was to get thoroughly soaked. Not mustard and water, y' understand, and not just your feet. Just get a bottle of some alcoholic liquor, it doesn't much matter whether it's rum, or brandy, or whiskey, as long as there's plenty of it; the thing is to get thoroughly squiffy. Keep on drinking as long as you can guide it to your mouth and then roll over, and sleep it off. My friend says that he's staved off an attack of pneumonia that way."

"I have no doubt that it would also be very effective in threatened cholera morbus, mumps and chickenpox," said the cashier. "I am willing to believe your friend warded off typhoid fever, measles, St. Vitus' dance, nostalgia and writer's cramp by the same potent preventive. I'm glad to learn of that remedy, Johnny; it appeals to me more strongly than a gallon of sage tea or onion syrup; still, as a temperate man, I think I would prefer to try something else first."

"They say that just plain, common kerosene will cure a cold," said the bill clerk. "You swallow about a teaspoonful and then rub some more on your throat and the bridge of your nose."

"How about lard and turpentine?" asked the cashier.

"Lard and turpentine's good," replied the bill clerk. "Tar and honey will generally do the business."

"I'm much obliged," returned the cashier. "I shall try each cure in succession, beginning to-night with the hot lemonade, and now I trust I may be permitted to proceed with my work without any further suggestions. It's conceded that I've got a cold and that I agree to try your remedies. Does that let me out?"

"Sure," said the bill clerk. "I was trying to help you out, that's all. You don't have to try anything unless you want to.

"It's your cold, but at the same time, if I had it, I'd cure it. If you don't like any of the ways I've told you you might try wrapping a blanket around you and sitting over the hot-air register. Let the hot air come up under the blanket, y'understand? I don't mean to sit right on the register; use a cane-seated chair. Sit there until the perspiration is well started——"

"Johnny," said the cashier, with tears in his voice, "don't you think it's bad enough to have the cold?"

One Drop of Raw Milk Magnified
Would Win You to Van Camp's

Could you see the myriad germs in a drop of raw milk, you would quit it. You would then know why the medical world is demanding sterilized milk.

Any disease germ that gets into milk quickly breeds millions like it.

They may be the germs of consumption, coming from tubercular cows. Or the germs of typhoid, from water used in washing the cans.

They may come from milkmen who are diseased, or they may come from uncleanly dairies.

These germs cannot all be avoided, no matter what care may be taken. The only protection that really protects is perfect sterilization.

To that we all must come.

Van Camp's is Safe

Van Camp's Milk is utterly sterile.

The cows and the milkmen are healthy. They are subject to constant inspection.

Our dairies are sanitary. Our evaporating plants are all built without wood.

Every can of milk is sterilized after the can is sealed. So the protection is absolute. No germ can exist in Van Camp's.

Pure Holstein Milk

Van Camp's comes from Holstein cows—the world's best breed. Holstein cows are robust and contented. They are famous for their vitality. The milk they give is vastly better for children than milk from mongrel cows.

This milk, fresh from the cow, is put into a vacuum. And a moderate heat, because of the vacuum, throws off the water in steam.

Thus we take out two-thirds of the water, and the milk that results is 28 per cent solids—8 per cent butter fat.

Nothing whatever is added, and nothing but water subtracted. The result is the richest, purest, cleanest milk that ever came into your home.

Six Cents Per Quart

The 10-cent can of Van Camp's contains a full pint. If you buy by the case, as every-one should, the cans will cost less than 10 cents.

When you replace the water which we take out, you have rich Holstein milk at about six cents per quart.

It is cheaper than raw milk, for half the price of raw milk is the cost of the daily delivery.

And Van Camp's means a cow in your kitchen. Rich milk or cream at any time, as little or much as you want.

No shortage; no planning in advance for your needs. And no waste whatever. An opened can keeps till you use it up.

You buy a case at a time, and all your milk needs are supplied for a month or more.

Serves Every Purpose

For coffee or cereals, add one part water, for Van Camp's is as thick as thick cream.

For cooking or drinking, add a little more water. Reduce to the richness desired.

Van Camp's gives to milk dishes a richness and flavor which you never get from raw milk.

Milkman's milk separates—before and after you get it. So your cooking milk, usually, is scarcely more than a half-milk.

In Van Camp's you get the whole milk—all the butter fat, all the solids. Yet it costs you less than a half-milk. See what a difference this makes in your milk dishes.

When Van Camp's is drunk cold, it has a slight almond flavor, due to the heat applied in sterilization. In cooking or coffee—where you heat the milk anyway—the slight scalded flavor is entirely lost.

This flavor is a sign of purity. It is essential to safety. For no careful mother will let children drink raw milk.

Not Like Condensed

Don't think of Van Camp's as condensed milk, for condensed milk is nearly half sugar. Sugar was the old way of preserving milk before the days of sterilization.

Condensed milk is so largely sugar that it is very expensive. And you can't use it for cooking because it's too sweet. Such unnatural milk is long out of date. Van Camp's is natural milk, preserved by modern methods.

Nor is Van Camp's like other brands of evaporated. For this is Holstein milk, reduced to the minimum bulk.

Common milk, only partly evaporated, is often said to be as good as Van Camp's. But nearly every housewife knows that it isn't. So don't be misled.

The 16-oz. can of Van Camp's sells for 10 cents; the 6-oz. can for 5 cents. So you get one-third more for your money in buying the larger cans. The milk is produced at our dairies, in six states, and sold by grocers everywhere.

WONDERLAND NOW BETTER THAN EVER

The stormy weather of the first of this week gave an opportunity for the Wonderland fun-makers to rest up for greater efforts to please. During the lay-off forced by weather repairs and alterations in the construction department and new rehearsals among the players of brand new performances kept all hands busy and now every attraction is at its level best. The Cinderella production, Golden Graces, Vaudeville and Girl Minstrels are at their best and Wonderland never presented a finer array of talent than at the present time.

The Sunday American Outing Club, disappointed in the use of their free tickets on Monday and Tuesday, have the consolation that there are still many good coupon days to come. Next week Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will publish the usual string of fourteen tickets, two of them absolutely free if presented at the park gate and the Vaudeville show and the others representing half-fare to the big rides and shows.

OUTING CLUB PLANS SPOILED BY RAIN

Rain at White City, Worcester, on Monday and Tuesday spoiled some well laid amusement plans of the Sunday American Outing Club and the park management, but there will be other days, and next Sunday the BOSTON AMERICAN will publish another string of free tickets for use at the great Lake Quinsigamond fun resort. The tickets next Sunday will be for the Theatre and Scenic Railway absolutely free and half-fare tickets to the Chutes, Airships and Jungle. Be sure to get the SUNDAY AMERICAN and join the Outing Club. The park gate is always free and the music, dancing and multitude of inside attractions are worth going miles to enjoy.

AT THE

HENRY F. MILLER
PIANO WAREROOMS
395 BOYLSTON STREET

All indications point to a tremendous business this Fall, and it would be an advantage to both ourselves and the buyer if a portion of this business could be done during August. To encourage a selection right now, we offer our entire stock of slightly used "Henry F. Miller" upright pianos for

$10 Down and $5 Per Month
During the rest of August only

Pianos of the grade and quality of the "Henry F. Miller" have never before been offered on such easy terms; and as we cannot continue this offer right through the year, there is a genuine opportunity now for those who wish both a high-grade piano and easy payments to select now. Delivery can be made later as desired. Largest stock and lowest prices in Boston.

The Strategy of the Fight for an Income Tax

Alabama's indorsement of the income tax is now definitive.

IT HAS PASSED BOTH HOUSES OF THE LEGISLATURE WITH ABSOLUTE UNANIMITY and been signed by the Governor.

This fact is phenomenal — a striking outward sign of a deep social conviction.

And in contrast with the swift and spontaneous action of Alabama —the seeming reluctance of its neighbor, Georgia, is plainly seen to be the Fabianism of a plutocratic lobby.

The matter may be brought forward again in the Georgia Legislature within a few days. But even if it goes over the present special session, the State will, in the ordinary course of its legislative events, have a chance to fall into line before many of the other States have voted.

The next State to face the issue is Illinois—a State regarded everywhere as specially representative of the Middle West. But, unfortunately, the Legislature of Illinois does not represent the intelligence and virtue of the people.

It is perhaps the most completely boss-ruled Legislature in the country.

The income tax is as popular in Illinois as in Alabama. And the fight for it in the Illinois Legislature next Winter against the massed forces of plutocracy, and its Hessian politics, promises to be a great sight.

Most of the New England and Middle States will also pass on the income tax next Winter. And a victory in Illinois will be of strategic importance because of its influence upon the action of New England—where it is supposed, somewhat erroneously, that the politics of Illinois is representatively Western.

The Legislatures in most of the other States of the Union have biennial sessions—and generally in the odd-numbered years.

They will face the income tax amendment in 1911.

It would seem that the Illinois Legislature is appointed to hold the key of the plutocratic position.

When the income tax shall have carried that redoubt the triumph will be decisive.

The Lawyer and the Man of Science

The controversy between Gifford Pinchot and the Administration presents a phase of the immemorial conflict between formal law and the facts of experience.

Pinchot, as a man of science habituated to an out-of-doors view of things, is bent upon the facts.

He sees the growth, under his eyes, of that gigantic water-power monopoly in the West which Mr. Roosevelt foresaw might come to overshadow the very government itself.

Pinchot is determined to deal with this monopoly by any means that will keep the water power in the possession of the people.

He is determined that the issue of the struggle between the government and the privileged combination shall leave the government on top.

Now the case looks altogether different to the higher powers of the administration.

The President and the Secretary of the Interior are in their mental make-up indoors men. They take the point of view traditionary with lawyers.

The practical facts of the economy of water power have only a secondary interest to them. Their duty as they understand it is to administer a formal code of laws.

If a conscientious discharge of this obligation will keep the neck of the public clear of the heel of the Water Power Trust, that is well and good. If not—well, Mr. Taft and Mr. Ballinger will hold themselves blameless.

Now, which of these two mental attitudes, Mr. American Citizen, is more likely to save the government of the United States from becoming the mere hallboy and typewriter of the Amalgamated Monopolies?

Which is the more competent at last for the vindication of law?

The administration seems to have scruples about its legal right to keep certain water-power sites exempt from private entry. But there is such a thing as being so nicely legal that the law gets trampled under foot.

Last week the Irrigation Congress, in session at Seattle, was thrown into a state of excitement at the reputed disclosures of facts showing that the Secretary of the Interior had shattered the Roosevelt conservation policy in Montana.

It was said that Mr. Ballinger had allowed millions of dollars of power-site lands to fall into the hands of the Water Power Trust.

The story is sensational, and should stir the country as it has stirred the Irrigation Congress.

It presents a great primary issue that must be met.

Shall the government be a little rough-handed—in the Roosevelt fashion—when necessary to maintain its sovereignty over private powers, or shall it lay down its life for its enemies on the altar of legal scrupulosity?

Nobody can believe that Mr. Taft and Mr. Ballinger could possibly do what they seem to have done in this water-power matter from any but the most conscientious motives.

But the question arises, Are not their motives too high, too fine for any earthly use?

Questions and Answers

Nirvana.

H. S. F.—The question, what means Nirvana? may best be answered in the words of Rhys Davids, a high authority on the subject. "Nirvana is not the extinction of a soul, but the extinction of that sinful, grasping condition of mind and heart which would otherwise, according to the law of Karma, be the cause of renewed incarnation. Nirvana is the same thing as a sinless, calm state of mind, and if translated at all may best, perhaps, be rendered holiness—that is, in the Buddhist sense, perfect peace, goodness and wisdom."

Lycurgus.

H. W. S.—Of Lycurgus nothing is known whatever. Some have even denied his existence. He is supposed to have lived about B. C. 850, some centuries before the beginning of reliable Grecian history. The so-called "Lycurgan" regulation, as imposed upon the Spartans, was made necessary by the situation. The citizens of Sparta were a small class of lords (estimated at about 9,000 in the suposed time of Lycurgus) among a tenfold number of slave Helots, and to keep these in subjection their whole training was military.

The Bow

R. M. M.—It is impossible to say when the bow was invented. It was in use long ages before there was any such thing as authentic history, and its reign was a long one. As a warlike weapon the bow lasted on in Europe all through the Middle Ages and well down into modern times. One of the amazing sights of the allied invasions of France in the year 1814 was that of the Cossack cavalry of Russia riding through the streets of Paris with bows and arrows.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE —ON— THINKING HARD

Written for the AMERICAN

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

(Now traveling in Europe.)

KNOWING what isn't so is not knowledge, although that is all that a good deal of human knowledge consists of.

Men claim to have a right to their own opinions. They certainly have a right to them if they are right opinions.

Most of our ideas of things are more the result of accident than they are the fruit of any deliberate search after the truth.

It is probably the fact that few people do any really hard thinking. Thinking of the downright kind is severe work, and most of us do only as little severe work as we have to.

People who work with their hands are said to belong to the laboring classes. They no more belong to the laboring classes than do people who work with their brains, if as much so. And because it is hard work to think, and to make an actual search for the truth, we are all of us liable to take things for granted.

We stumble upon an idea, find it congenial to our tastes, let it settle into a fixed conviction, and identify it with truth and bank upon it as truth.

Trained thinkers are the only ones whose opinions are of primary value, and even then only when their opinions relate to matters upon which their disciplined powers have been specifically exercised.

It is at this point that clergymen are constantly making mistakes. They are prone to imagine that because they have been intellectually trained they are therefore qualified to speak with authority upon all matters lying within intellectual range.

Division of Labor Is Essential for the Best Results

If they have been properly fitted for their specific work they ought to be able to speak in a manner almost prophetic, if not quite so, upon questions of religious truth and life, but they are not in a position to discuss problems of political economy, for example, unless they have given to that department of inquiry the same kind of concentrated attention that they have devoted to theology.

Division of labor is as essential to the best results in the intellectual world as in the physical. The brain has but two lobes, and only one of those, so physicists tell us, does any work.

If a man is going to talk it is for his own interests, as well as for that of other people, that he should understand pretty thoroughly what it is he is talking about; and all vital questions are too large for any one person to be thoroughly en rapport with any considerable number of them.

Lawyers are perhaps as great offenders in this respect as clergymen. It is not, as a rule, an easy thing to tell a lawyer anything that he doesn't already know.

The severity of the training necessary for success at the bar seems to create in them a suspicion that their knowledge covers the entire four quadrants of the intellectual circle, and there are probably fe members of their profession that woul hesitae to discourse upon almost any them lying within the circumference of practic human interest, scientific, political or re ligious.

Scientists Pretend to Metaphysics with No Training.

Editors also labor under the disadvantage of being credited with that diversifie familiarity with all sublunary matters tha will fit them to speak the last word upo any question that touches human concern There is no position that in point of oppor tunity is comparable with the editoria position, and none whose incumbent re quires to be so encyclopedic a man and t have delegated to him so large a consign ment of the divince omniscience.

Scientists whose entire research has bee devoted to material things are constantl interlarding their discussions with meta physical touches, without having been them selves metaphysically trained. Knowing good deal about what is material they assume that that carries with it an understanding of what is immaterial, and the consequence is such a mixture of truth and of guesses at truth as vitiates both classes of conclusion.

Another instance of the same would be to say that physicians are exceedingly apt to be advocates of skepticism and deniers of immortality. However expert in matters of physiology, their acquisitions in that direction do not create for them a competency in the domain of thought and feeling. An appreciation of corporosity does not give them an appreciation of mentality and spirituality, however much they may think that it does.

Truth Is as Distinct from Opinion as Sky from Earth

The sincere object of every honest man is to arrive at the truth. Thinking a thing is so does not make it so.

Truth is as distinct from opinion as sky is from ground. A man may perhaps "pull through" on a basis of false convictions; so he may be able to buy a pound of bread with a coin that is nominally silver, but actually pewter, but the possibility of getting a fraudulent crumb by that means would never be accepted as valid argument in behalf of vitiated currency.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THAY maik me tired, sed Pa, all of these almost-fiters. I am almost ashaimed of my sex wen I reed about them.

What is the matter now, deer, sed Ma. She knew that Pa had been kind of cross evver since he caim hoam from the offis, & she called him deer beekaus she was afrade he mite git up & put on his coat. Ma has been married to Pa a long time & she knows that wen he wants to go down town a while at nite he is eether vary nice or vary cross, so wen he is too nice she is cross, & wen he is too cross she is nice. Ma is vary smart for a woman.

Haven't you been reeding about them? sed Pa. The Reds & and the Blues caver in Massychusets? No, sed Ma; tell me about it, luv.

I almost hate to talk about it, sed Pa. The Reds & the Blues are a bunch of soljers wich are playing at war. Think of it, sed pa, a bunch of major domos etc. in thare gold lace, bossing a lot of poor tired soljers & sending them on long marches in the blinding rain, & for what? Wen the Reds, have marched ten (10) miles, carrying full weight, wich is nothing excep tents, pick axes & blankets, thay cum upon the Blues and surprise them in thare tents. The Blues, taiken completely off thare guard, forgit to taik the drinks wich is poured out for them, & beat a ree-treat acrost the hills, leeving the sideboard to the Reds. Then the general wich is leeding the Blues gives them a swift call down. You cowards, he says, how dare you turn yure backs to the foe? Beekaus you led the way, says one of the Blues. You ran. So I did, says the General of the Blues. I ran, but only thee-retickally. If it had been a reel war I wud have stayed till I emtied my glass.

That isent the worst of it, sed Pa. While the Reds are grouped around the sideboard, along cums the cavalry of the Blues, led by the rough rider Lutenant Slewfoot. The Reds are com-pletely swept aside, skattered like chaff bee-foar the wind. In the mad confushun wich follows, Pa sed to Ma, the gallant cavalry-men of the Blues drinks as much of the refreshments as they can, & gives the rest to thare thirsty steeds. This counts three (3) points for the Blues, & one (1) blue ribbon for thare horses.

It is vary inter-esting, I think, sed Ma, bee-ginning for to yawn. Then what happens?

Then the darkness cums, ser Pa. The stars look down upon the peaceful scene, littel dreaming of the awful car-nage wich is soon to cum. On yonder hill, but faintly visible thru the gathering gloom, a battery of Red artillery is un-limbering its guns. Then a gailant capting of the Red artillery shouts to the slepy Blues, If you do not surrender goodness knows what the end will be, bekaus we can shoot jest as strate! & the general of the Blues says, Goodness me, it is those awful Reds aggena! That counts six (6) points for the Reds.

It was not so in the old days, sed Pa. To a old veteran like me, wich saw Deth stalking along thru the thickets of Mishinary Ridge, & wich loked down at the clouds from the peek of Lookout Mountain, this toy war is a awful bust. To a man of my caliber, sed Pa, wich stood with stern face & fixed baynet prepared to meet the brillyunt cavalry charge of the Demon Forrest, thes tin soljers have but littel glory.

I nevver knew that you was in the Civil War, sed Ma. I have always understood that wen the nashun was shaking in that dread time, you was looking at the Niagara Falls from the Canadian side. If the soljers of our army wants to practis a littel befoar our next war, I shudent think you wud care. Why don't you stop worrying about such things, & pay more attenshun to yure own bizness.

I didnt expeck a woman to understand my feelings, sed Pa. I mite have known that any woman wud rather see a play war than a reel one.

Of course I wud, sed Ma.

All rite, Pa sed, then after this wen you & I have a few words, let us play that we are scrapping. You can be the Blues & I will be the Reds. I will cum in lait, & you will call me a loafer, thee-retikally speaking. I will remind you that you bettered yure posishun mateerially by marrying me. You will? sed Ma.

Yes, sed Pa, but only thee-retikally.

You do well to say that, sed Ma. It had better be only thee-retikally. But reemember, sed Ma, doant carry this imitashun bizness any further. Doant evver cum hoam with a thee-retickal pay check. That is one (1) thing, Ma sed, that must be strickly real.

The Life Saver

By C. B. QUINCY

He was tall and wide, and eagle-eyed,
And he loved the boisterous billows
As a husband loves his timid bride,
Or a sleepy-head loves the pillows.
The bumps stood out on his legs and arms
Like the bumps on a hardwood tree,
And day after day he was heard to say:
"The rescuing kid; that's me!"
One August day on the crowded beach
A girl tripped into the water;
She was nothing at all if not a peach,
And looked like a rich man's daughter.
Far out she swam as a mermaid swims,
Then sank with a piteous shriek!
The life-saver caught her just in time—
They were married the following week.
Now comes the sorrowful climax, friends,
With which this touching narrative ends.
He saved his wife, this bravest of men,
And he's never saved a thing since then.

A Difference

They were taking afternoon tea and cigarettes on the balcony of the club.

"So they're engaged!" said the girl with the eyeglass.

"But do you think," asked the girl with the fan, "that he'll make her a good husband?"

"She'll make him a good husband," the one with the eyeglass snapped.

And the girl with the walking stick thought it jolly well put, don't you know.
